The understanding that a community is an identifiable group of people who share common values, norms, and interests, and who are committed to the well-being of the community as a whole, is a key concept in community development. This understanding is based on the idea that communities are not just geographical areas, but are also social and cultural entities. Communities are formed by people who share a common identity and a sense of belonging. They are also shaped by the values and norms that guide their behavior. Community development is the process of helping communities to identify their needs and strengths, and to work together to address those needs. It is a process that is based on the idea that communities are the best place to start when it comes to solving problems and improving the quality of life for all members.
