Routledge Revivals: Radio Broadcasting from 1920 to 1990 (1991) Diane Foxhill Carothers, 2016-11-10 First published in 1991 this book presents a comprehensive annotated bibliography of radio broadcasting Its eleven chapter categories cover almost the entire range of radio broadcasting with the exception of radio engineering due to its technical complexity although some of the historical volumes do encompass aspects thus providing background material Entries are primarily restricted to published books although a number of trade journals and periodicals are also included Each entry includes full bibliographic information including the ISBN or ISSN where available and an annotation written by the author with the original text in hand

The Mass Audience James Webster, Patricia F. Phalen, 2013-11-05 In the early 20th century a new and distinctive concept of the audience rose to prominence The audience was seen as a mass a large collection of people mostly unknown to one another that was unified through exposure to media This construct offered a pragmatic way to map audiences that was relevant to industry government and social theorists In a relatively short period of time it became the dominant model for studying the audience Today it is so pervasive that most people simply take it for granted Recently media scholars have reopened inquiry into the meaning of audience They question the utility of the mass audience concept characterizing it as insensitive to differences among audience members inescapably bound up with discredited notions of mass society or serving only a narrow set of industrial interests The authors of this volume find that these assertions are often false and unwarranted either by the historical record or by contemporary industry practice Instead they argue for a rediscovery of the dominant model by summarizing and critiquing the very considerable body of literature on audience behavior and by demonstrating different ways of analyzing mass audiences Further they provide a framework for understanding the future of the audience in the new media environment and suggest how the concept of mass audience can illuminate research on media effects cultural studies and media policy
