

Short Form Content for Big Minds: Teaching Post-Millennials Phonetics Using YouTube Music Clips

Kassim Boudjelal Safir

ABSTRACT

Boredom, daydreaming, attention-getting, chatting, rebellion, fighting back, active resistance, cheating, self-defeating attitude. This is a short list of the recurrent symptoms tertiary post-millennial students communicate when exposed to canonical dry academic content. Students learning phonetics through the outmoded content-based approach have shown the same verbal /nonverbal behaviours. Edutainment and process-based learning are rarely used in Algerian schools. No wonder YouTube -as a short-form content provider- has become one of the most serious competitors of schools worldwide. A recorded experimental study, followed by a satisfactory scale, was used to assess the students' performances and interests. The results showed higher scores of students using YouTube music clips as an edutaining process-based approach. A surprising list of nonverbal (micro) signs confirmed the hypothesis. Students from the experimental group as compared with the control group, asked for more lessons to better their comprehension of phonetics, a thing that we couldn't predict. The potential practical implications of the following paper are multiple. The first one is what could be called the "pedagogisation" of entertaining tools like YouTube and their inclusion in schools to learn academic content. The second would be the identification of all the possible types of (micro) signs students would send when exposed to boring vs. interesting content or/and when applying a methodology to teach theoretical content as in the cases of phonetics, grammar, or even literature. Last but not least, the exploration of semiotic signs YouTube slingers would send to the receivers i.e., students could be of paramount importance.

Keywords: Edutainment, Pedagogisation, Post-Millennials, Phonetics, Micro Signals, Youtube.

1. INTRODUCTION

"Old schoolteachers suck, Pink rocks", is an anonymous Facebook comment of one of the post-millennial students who participated in the experiment. This statement confirms one of the golden rules in foreign language learning. There is no harm to have fun and play seriously with languages (Lillemyr, 2020). Boredom, daydreaming, and passive resistance to learning -to name only these- are simply unheard yet deafening loud nonverbal messages teachers must listen to. It seems paradoxical, but this is the truth. Old schoolteachers who try helplessly to teach post-millennials the way they have been taught are probably living in the 80s.

Teachers' persistence to use "their" obsolete approaches based on content rather than process has proved their failure to update the pedagogical and didactical tools they are using. 17% of the cheating cases, in the Algerian language departments, were found to be related to phonetics and phonology exams according to a former head of an English department in the province of Algiers. Students were usually asked to transcribe words or passages, to put stress on words and sentences, identify words with central vowels, completing definitions, fill in the gaps, completing diagrams, identifying false/true statements, mentioning the differences between auditory phonetics, acoustic phonetics and articulatory phonetics, or defining terms like glottalling, smoothing, assimilation, elision only these. And guess what, phonetics exams subjects are written, never oral/spoken...! Babies don't learn phonetics; they learn pronunciation through listening and babbling as a form of primitive speech, i.e., imitating their mothers (Speidel & Nelson, 2012). Young immigrants can learn pronunciation within one or two years in a foreign country and can reach semi-nativeness if they stay longer than two years. (Luisa & Pilar, 2003)

Those kinds of content-based exams have significantly contributed to the confusion of the students and the destruction of their self-confidence and thus self-esteem inciting them to "find" a solution to their seemingly academic issue: cheating. Many brilliant students thought that they were not. Written exams alone can never reflect the real students' potential, let alone the exclusively content
