memorabilia     Encyclopedia of Media and Propaganda in Wartime America Martin J. Manning, Clarence R. Wyatt, 2010-12-20 This fascinating compilation of reference entries documents the unique relationship between mass media propaganda and the U S military a relationship that began in the period before the American Revolution and continues to this day sometimes cooperative sometimes combative and always complex The Encyclopedia of Media and Propaganda in Wartime America brings together a group of distinguished scholars to explore how war has been reported and interpreted by the media in the United States and what effects those reports and interpretations have had on the people at home and on the battlefield Covering press U S military relationships from the early North American colonial wars to the present wars in Iraq and Afghanistan this two volume encyclopedia focuses on the ways in which government and military leaders have used the media to support their actions and the ways in which the media has been used by other forces with different views and agendas The volumes highlight major events and important military political and cultural players offering fresh perspectives on all of America s conflicts Bringing these wars together in one source allows readers to see how media affected the conflicts individually but also understand how the use of the various forms of media print radio television film and electronic have developed and changed over the years     The American Cowboy in Life and Legend Bart McDowell, 1972 Traces the history of the cattle industry from its beginning in Mexico to the present     Framing First Contact Kate Elliott, 2020-10-29 Representations of first contact the first meetings of European explorers and Native Americans have always had a central place in our nation s historical and visual record They have also had a key role in shaping and interpreting that record In Framing First Contact author Kate Elliott looks at paintings by artists from George Catlin to Charles M Russell and explores what first contact images tell us about the process of constructing national myths and how those myths acquired different meanings at different points in our nation s history First contact images with their focus on beginnings rather than conclusive action or determined outcomes might depict historical events in a variety of ways Elliott argues that nineteenth century artists responding to the ambiguity and indeterminacy of the subject used the visualized space between cultures meeting for the first time to address critical contemporary questions and anxieties Taking works from the 1840s through the 1910s as case studies paintings by Robert W Weir Thomas Moran and Albert Bierstadt along with Catlin and Russell Elliott shows how many first contact representations especially those commissioned and conceived as official history speak blatantly of conquest racial superiority and imperialism Yet others communicate more nuanced messages that might surprise contemporary viewers Elliott suggests it was the very openness of the subject of first contact that allowed artists consciously or not to speak of contemporary issues beyond imperialism and conquest Uncovering those issues Framing First Contact forces us to think about why we tell the stories we do and why those stories matter     Remington, Russell and the Language of Western Art Peter H. Hassrick, Frederic Remington, 2000 As young men Remington and Russell struck out for the West seeking adventure and self identity Remington stayed for only one year Russell for the rest of his life But both eventually became artists and both took as their subject the disappearing West and its people. Different in temperament and style they became the focal point of a manufactured rivalry that dominated the American art scene at the turn of the twentieth century and in essence pitted East against West. Camps of followers developed and duels were waged on their behalf in the press although neither Remington nor Russell directly engaged in the rivalry.
