Chartres, the Masons who Built a Legend John James, 1982-01-01      Legends in Limestone Linda Seidel, 1999-10-15 Whereas twelfth century pilgrims flocked to the church of St Lazare in Autun to visit the relics of its patron saint present day pilgrims journey there to admire its superb sculpture said to have been created by the artist Gislebertus whose name is inscribed above one of the church doors These two cults of sculptor and of saint form points of departure and arrival for Linda Seidel s study Legends in Limestone reveals how Gislebertus sculptor was discovered and subsequently sanctified over the course of the last century Seidel makes a compelling case for the identification of the name with an ancestor of the local ducal family invoked for his role in the acquisition of the precious relics With the aid of evidence drawn from the richly carved decoration of the building she demonstrates how medieval visitors would have read a different holy narrative in the church fabric one that constructed before their eyes an account of their patron saint s life Legends in Limestone an absorbing study of one of France s most revered medieval monuments provides fresh insights into modern and medieval interpretive practices      The Search for a Patron in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance David G. Wilkins, Rebecca L. Wilkins, 1996      ECRM 2021 20th European Conference on Research Methods in Business and Management Dr Manuel Au-Yong-Oliveira, Prof Carlos Costa, 2021-06-07 Conference Proceedings of 20th European Conference on Research Methods in Business and Management      Art Book Review ,1982      Design Book Review ,1985      Architectural Science Review ,1990      Art for Travellers France Bill Hannan, Lorna Hannan, 2004 France holds some of the most remarkable and well known collections in the art world This thorough and accessible guide covers every epoch taking travelers on a journey through centuries of wonderful paintings architecture and sculpture Full color illustrations      The Stone Carvers Marjorie Hunt, 1999 The lives and careers of two master stone cutters Italian Americans Roger Morigi and Vincent Palumbo are explored here in a celebration of an arcane trade and craft      In Search of the Unknown in Medieval Architecture John James, 2007 John James is an Australian architect and medieval historian Since 1969 he has been searching for the origins of the Gothic style beginning with a five year study of Chartres cathedral At that time there were no coherent techniques for analysing the detailed construction history of existing stone structures This he created He expanded his research to include all the early Gothic churches in the Paris region with a three year survey of over 3500 buildings His most important discovery has been that all churches of this period were constructed in many short campaigns by mobile building teams and that major innovation was more likely to occur in the smaller buildings than in the larger This volume makes available 42 of the author s studies on the development of Gothic architecture in France      Studies in English Pre-Romanesque and Romanesque Architecture Richard Gem, 2003 This volume completes the publication of a collection of Richard Gem s archaeological and architectural assessments of English ecclesiastical architecture between the 7th and 12th centuries Volume II which has been published and must be bought separately despite the continued pagination and chapter

On Common Ground Francis Reed, 1991. A sparkling look at the history and future of ground space, people, space in England. Taking the remote and fortifying Commons as the starting point, this book is about the framework of space and society from which Architecture grows. Back cover.

Sacred Places and Profane Spaces Jamie S. Scott, Paul S. Housley, 1991-09-30. The editors and contributors to this pioneering volume have focused the lens of geography on new territory as they inquire critically into the spatial dimensions of Judaism, Christianity and Islam, making this interdisciplinary project truly a new idea in the study of comparative religion and human geography. Editors Jamie Scott and Paul Simpson Housley have organized the study into three broad areas of inquiry and have coined the term Geographics to encompass the three distinct yet interrelated spatial dimensions implicated in the study of religion. The first area concerns the literal role played by specific sites, regions or geographical phenomena in the development of the three religions. The focus here is on city, wilderness, river valley and mountain, as well as flood, earthquake, whirlwind and famine, with attention devoted to methodological, epistemological and ontological issues. The symbolic or interpreted role played by these same specific entities in the three religions is the second notion to be explored. The third focus is an inquiry into the geography of prophetic and apocalyptic visions and the role of geographical imagination in the development of religious self-understanding. This interface of natural and historical geography with the geography of the prophetic and apocalyptic imagination produces a graphic, sometimes terrifying landscape. The volume's nine essayists have approached their chapters with this threefold schematization in mind so that the book consists of one study devoted to each of these dimensions in Judaism, Christianity and Islam, as well as an introduction and afterword by the editors. Each essay discusses the relationship of the spatial and the sacred in scripture and in subsequent literary and theological reflection upon scriptural themes. The range of topics and variety of approaches used reflect the interpretive ambiguities that stem from the unique social, political and economic functions conferred on places and spaces of particular significance in the life and thought of a religious tradition or community. The section on Judaism explores Jewish agricultural settlements in Palestine, the Temple Mount, al-Haram al-Sharif and the Garden of Eden. In-depth looks at Finland, women's geography and the apocalyptic world comprise the section on Christianity. Iranian feasting and pilgrimage circuits, modern Egypt and sacred geography are assessed in the final section on Islam. This carefully edited, innovative study offers a unique approach to the study of religion and will be read profitably by scholars and students of religion and geography.

A Snakes's Tail Full of Ants John Lane, 1996 There is evidence of a sea change in Western consciousness over the last three or four decades of the 20th century which implies a fundamental rejection of the arts of humanism the tradition of art for the elite art cut off from society from nature and from the sacred added as Eric Gill once said like a sauce to otherwise unpalatable fish cannot serve the needs of our future society John Lane both celebrates the power and challenges the defect of this 500 year old tradition invariably claimed to be the finest that has ever existed He questions whether the institution of the self directed professional artist was a great step forward in the story of self realization or whether it was on the contrary a dehumanising aberration in the history of humankind Challenging and illuminating this book looks forward to a time of revitalized aesthetic activity when creative expression is not lofty professionalized and unapproachable but closely interwoven with the activities of daily life
