

Character Education

Grades 6-12 Year 2

"Great character has no facades. It shines with honesty, respect, true humility, and an inner faith that knows we are but the recipients of a great gift."

- T. Pagnu

Education can too often focus largely on academic achievement. However, a truly complete education builds upon the foundation of attention to the importance of a strong character. Indeed, a student's moral character will shape the course of his or her life more assuredly than any specific academic skill. It is for this reason that Character Education is a must in the education of every child.

Children who have not been taught how to develop and maintain strong moral values cannot be expected to behave correctly and grow into morally strong adults. The importance of establishing a baseline value system in today's children is clear; the children in classrooms today are the caretakers of tomorrow. If they do not establish strong moral character now, the future of our world is uncertain. This book presents strategies that have been used successfully by an entire school population to incorporate character education into the overall school curriculum.

This book builds on the first year of Character Education to complete the two-year program. If year one has been completed, widespread improvement will be evidenced in a variety of areas such as student behavior, self-esteem, school spirit, and academic achievement.

Year two encompasses nine new values, which were again selected because of their universal appeal. As in year one, the lessons come from all over the world and from a variety of cultures and religions. Students will continue to see that no matter where they go, or who they meet, or what they believe, these values are important cornerstones for building a strong moral character.

The primary values stressed in year two are:

September	Honesty	December	Peace	March	Creativity
October	Cooperation	January	Patience	April	Environmental Awareness
November	Humility	February	Courage	May	Freedom

This year, students will learn that the values they are studying are simply extensions of the values they learned last year. As before, this program works on an individual classroom basis, but the best results are seen when the program is implemented throughout the school. When students see values being practiced in the total education environment, they cannot fail to notice the positive effect these values have on their behavior and on the overall environment.
