History
Discipline Based Art Education (DBAE) is a term that was first used in the 1980s to describe a curriculum that integrates art with other disciplines. It is a response to the traditional art education model that focused on the study of art history and technique. DBAE is a more holistic approach that emphasizes the connection between art and other subjects, such as science, social studies, and language arts. It is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of art and its role in society.

Aesthetics
Aesthetics is the branch of philosophy that deals with the nature of beauty and the arts. It is a discipline that explores the principles of art and the human experience of beauty. Aesthetics is a central component of DBAE, as it provides the theoretical foundation for understanding and appreciating art. It is a discipline that is both ancient and modern, with roots in classical philosophy and contemporary thought.

Evaluation
Evaluation is the process of assessing the quality and value of a program or product. It is a discipline that involves the collection and analysis of data to determine the effectiveness of a program. Evaluation is a key component of DBAE, as it provides a means for measuring the impact of art education on students and the community. It is a discipline that is both quantitative and qualitative, with a focus on both data and interpretation.

Implementation
Implementation is the process of putting a plan or program into effect. It is a discipline that involves the coordination of resources and the execution of tasks. Implementation is a key component of DBAE, as it provides a means for ensuring that the curriculum is effectively delivered to students. It is a discipline that is both theoretical and practical, with a focus on both planning and execution.

Roles
Roles are the functions or positions that individuals or groups perform in a society or organization. They are a key component of DBAE, as they provide a means for understanding the social context of art education. Roles are a discipline that is both descriptive and prescriptive, with a focus on both what is and what should be.

Connections
Connections are the relationships or links between different concepts or disciplines. They are a key component of DBAE, as they provide a means for understanding the interdisciplinary nature of art education. Connections are a discipline that is both analytical and synthetic, with a focus on both identifying and creating links.
