

Since the beginning of our struggle for freedom, questions were asked and doubts expressed if it was possible in case of India, divided by different faiths, races, castes and inhibited by superstitious and prejudices to mould itself into a nation-state. Repeatedly such misgivings were refuted. "There is only one India" Pandit Nehru declared "of which all of us, you and I, are inhabitants...." "All the culture of India, whether it comes from the North or the South or anywhere else, is our common heritage...." The unity of language, unity of religion, race and culture are no doubt helpful for national integration, but they are not essential and do not themselves ensure the growth of common interests and aspirations. National integration can be founded more easily on the bedrock of geographical unity, a common heritage, a common concern for the present and a common aspiration for the future, helping to evolve favourable socio-political and economic conditions to enable such an impulse to realise itself through growth and prosperity which elevates all and where every man, woman and child partakes of the
