With well-defined aims and a methodology that focused on exploring systems of concepts through their linguistic labels and comparing them across languages in different cultural settings in order to find their underlying principles of organization. Research across a number of fields: especially philosophy, logic, linguistics, anthropology, and psychology. There are forerunners to cognitive anthropology, major theorists who formulated anthropological approaches to language and thought and considered them comparatively (especially the American anthropological linguists Boas, Sapir and Whorf, and the French structuralists Hertz, Mauss, L'evi-Bruhl, and L'evi- Strauss). But cognitive anthropology is today a loose coalition of researchers in several distinct subdisciplines, where developments are converging on a renewed interest in cognition in its cultural setting.

Directions in Cognitive Anthropology Janet W. D. Dougherty, 1985      A Companion to Cognitive Anthropology David B. Kronenfeld, Giovanni Bennardo, Victor C. de Munck, Michael D. Fischer, 2011-04-25 A Companion to Cognitive Anthropology offers a comprehensive overview of the development of cognitive anthropology from its inception to the present day and presents recent findings in the areas of theory methodology and field research in twenty nine key essays by leading scholars Demonstrates the importance of cognitive anthropology as an early constituent of the cognitive sciences Examines how culturally shared and complex cognitive systems work how they are structured how they differ from one culture to another how they are learned and passed on Explains how cultural or collective vs individual knowledge distinguishes cognitive anthropology from cognitive psychology Examines recent theories and methods for studying cognition in real world scenarios Contains twenty nine key essays by leading names in the field      New Directions in Psychological Anthropology

Theodore Schwartz, Geoffrey M. White, Catherine A. Lutz, 1992 The field of psychological anthropology has changed a great deal since the 1940s and 1950s when it was often known as Culture and Personality Studies Rooted in psychoanalytic psychology its early practitioners sought to extend that psychology through the study of cross cultural variation in personality and child rearing practices Psychological anthropology has since developed in a number of new directions Tensions between individual experience and collective meanings remain as central to the field as they were fifty years ago but alongside fresh versions of the psychoanalytic approach other approaches to the study of cognition emotion the body and the very nature of subjectivity have been introduced And in the place of an earlier tendency to treat a culture as an undifferentiated whole psychological anthropology now recognizes the complex internal structure of cultures The contributors to this state of the art collection are all leading figures in contemporary psychological anthropology and they write about recent developments in the field Sections of the book discuss cognition developmental psychology biology psychiatry and psychoanalysis areas that have always been integral to psychological anthropology but which are now being transformed by new perspectives on the body meaning agency and communicative practice      Ergonomics, Health and Safety W. Singleton, J. Dirkx, 1991 The following chapters represent a cross section of current thinking and action in the related fields of Ergonomics Health and Safety Inevitably there is extensive overlap between these three topics Ergonomics by definition is concerned with the world of work in its broadest sense that is purposeful activity there is often an associated monetary gain but this is not an essential aspect domestic activity and road transport are amongst the obvious exceptions Health in this context means largely occupational health Safety is occupational safety with a related excursion into road safety All this is very much in line with the career of Professor Paul Verhaegen the inspirer of this volume Originally trained in medicine his interests were and are in health safety and working efficiency within occupational settings including the effects of cultural differences a more specialized interest engendered by his long residence in what used to be the Belgian

Congo Language, Space, and Social Relationships Giovanni Bennardo, 2009 This book discusses the relationship between language and the mental organisation of knowledge and is based on the results of a fieldwork project carried out in the Kingdom of Tonga It challenges some existing assumptions and proposes a new foundational cultural model radiality to show how space time and social relationships are expressed both linguistically and cognitively Representing Direction in Language and Space Emile van der Zee, J. M. Slack, 2003 This book considers how it is possible for people to use directions like above the table or over the city How does our brain or any other information processing system represent a direction as a spatial entity And how is it possible to link such a representation to language so that we talk about a direction we have in mind When we look at or imagine a scene what entities can be employed for representing a direction and what are the parts in language that can be used to talk about directions This book brings together research from linguistics psychology philosophy computer science anthropology and neuroscience to answer these intriguing questions By considering direction representation across different languages and in different information processing systems this book gives an overview of the main issues in this area for both the interested novice and the specialized researcher The Development of Cognitive Anthropology Roy G. D'Andrade, 1995-01-27 In an historical account of the growth and development of the field of cognitive anthropology Roy D Andrade examines how cultural knowledge is organised within and between human minds He begins by examining the research carried out during the 1950s and 1960s which was concerned with how different cultures classify kinship relationships and the natural environment and then traces the development of more complex and sophisticated cognitive theories of classification in anthropology which took place in the 1970s and 1980s In an analysis of more recent developments the author considers work involving cultural models emotion motivation and action He concludes with a summary of the theoretical perspective of cognitive anthropology Cognitive Anthropology Stephen A. Tyler, 1969

Cultural Models Giovanni Bennardo, Victor C. De Munck, 2014 This book is about cultural models that are considered units of analysis for an approach to culture overcoming the dichotomy between the individual and the collective The genesis of the concept of cultural model is traced A methodological trajectory that blends qualitative and quantitative techniques is outlined A survey follows of the research about cultural models whose results generate a typology The book closes with suggestions for future research The Routledge Handbook of Language and Culture Farzad Sharifian, 2014-12-17 The Routledge Handbook of Language and Culture presents the first comprehensive survey of research on the relationship between language and culture It provides readers with a clear and accessible introduction to both interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary studies of language and culture and addresses key issues of language and culturally based linguistic research from a variety of perspectives and theoretical frameworks This Handbook features thirty three newly commissioned chapters which cover key areas such as cognitive psychology cognitive linguistics cognitive anthropology linguistic anthropology cultural anthropology and sociolinguistics offer insights into the historical development contemporary theory

Beine, 2016-11-16 How people make sense of illness is in part culturally determined Existing community beliefs and presuppositions are organized as cultural models which make meaning of new situations such as the HIV AIDS epidemic These cultural constructions can also contribute to the spread of the epidemic This volume examines the meaning and cultural contexts of HIV AIDS in Nepal where AIDS is relatively new and rapidly growing David K Beine A Conceptual Analysis of Tongan Spatial Nouns Giovanni Bennardo, 2000 Maya Dwellings in Hieroglyphs and Archaeology Shannon E. Plank, 2004 This study considers a set of buildings in the Lowland Maya area of Mexico and Central America defined by its association with the indigenous architectural classification otoot dwelling These have proven resistant to archaeologists attempts to develop effective classifications and to address their functions and roles in Classic Maya society This investigation takes as a point of departure the terms attached to the structures by the ancient Maya elites themselves Because hieroglyphic texts that contain architectural terms occur on lintels doorjambs monumental stairways etc and because the terms typically refer to the structure in which the monument is mounted it becomes possible to link specific buildings and building groups with ancient Maya ways of classifying constructing and imagining inhabited space A bridge can therefore be built between the hieroglyphic and the archaeological records in a very specific set of contexts
