Disability And The City International Perspectives:

Disability and the City Rob Imrie, 1996-05-28 People with disabilities are one of the poorest groups in Western societies In particular they lack power education and opportunities For most disabled people their daily reality is dependence on a carer while trying to survive on state welfare payments The dominant societal stereotype of disability as a pitiful state reinforces the view that people with disabilities are somehow less than human In taking exception to these and related conceptions of disability this book explores one of the crucial contexts within which the marginal status of disabled people is experienced the interrelationships between disability physical access and the built environment The author seeks to explore some of the critical processes underpinning the social construction and production of disability as a state of marginalization and oppression in the built environment These concerns are interwoven with a discussion of the changing role of the state in defining categorising and re producing states of disablement for people with disabilities Focusing primarily on the United Kingdom although with a substantial discussion of disability and access issues in the USA the book also considers the role of the design professionals architects planners and building control officers in the construction of specific spaces and places which literally lock people with disabilities out From the shattered paving stones along the high street to the absence of induction loops in a civic building people with disabilities daily negotiate through hostile environments Using a range of empirical material the book documents how the environmental planning system in the United Kingdom is attempting to address the inaccessible nature of the built environment for people with disabilities while discussing how disabled people are contesting the constraints placed upon their mobility The book draws on a range of ideas from geography sociology and environmental planning and reflects the emergent interest in planning schools with equal opportunity issues and planning for minority groups It will be relevant to final year geography planning and architecture courses and postgraduate planning courses

International Perspectives on Teaching with Disability Michael Jeffress, 2018-03-21 Efforts to reduce discrimination and increase diversity on campuses coupled with shrinking budgets causing administrators to devote more resources toward recruiting and retaining students with disabilities are fuelling an explosion of research in the area of inclusive education An important focus that has been largely neglected is the place of teachers with disabilities in academe International Perspectives on Teaching with Disability brings together 25 multi disciplinary scholars with disabilities from Africa Canada the Caribbean the UK Israel and the United States to share their struggles and successes in teaching with disability The 18 chapters are written largely from autoethnographic perspectives grounded in solid academic research but full of anecdotes and self reflexive narratives that provide insights into the lived experiences of the authors Woven into the narratives are discussions of the complexities of self disclosure and self advocacy the varied and often problematic ways disability is experienced perceived and discussed in society and in the classroom the challenges of navigating academe with disability the value of disability pedagogy the positive student outcomes achieved by teaching through disability as well as practical applications and lessons learned that will benefit educators administrators and students preparing to become teachers This book is written to champion the integral place and role of disabled educators in academe Current educators with disability will be affirmed Those with disability aspiring to become teachers will be encouraged Temporarily able bodied administrators and educators will be challenged Everyone will be informed This book will be a welcome addition to reading lists in a wide array of academic fields including Education Pedagogy Disability Studies Human Resources Management and Sociology

Disability and Shopping Ieva Eskytė, 2019-01-15 Disability and Shopping Customers Markets and the State provides an examination of the diverse experiences and perspectives of disabled customers industry and civil society It discusses how the interaction between the three stakeholders should be shaped at aiming to decrease inequality and marginalisation Shopping is a part of everyday modern life and yet businesses struggle to adequately meet the needs of 80 million disabled customers in the European Union single market While there has been extensive research into how individuals engage in customer roles and experience and how businesses and policies both shape and respond to these little is known of the same dynamics and practices regarding people with impairments This book addresses this need by revealing the perspectives interactions and experiences of disabled customers and their interaction with policy and business It will be required reading for all scholars and students of disability studies sociology marketing and customer relations
