High Tech and High Heels in the Global Economy Carla Freeman, 2000-03-15 High Tech and High Heels in the Global Economy is an ethnography of globalization positioned at the intersection between political economy and cultural studies. Carla Freeman's fieldwork in Barbados grounds the processes of transnational capitalism, production, consumption, and the crafting of modern identities in the lives of Afro Caribbean women working in a new high tech industry called informatics. It places gender at the center of transnational analysis and local Caribbean culture and history at the center of global studies. Freeman examines the expansion of the global assembly line into the realm of computer-based work and focuses specifically on the incorporation of young Barbadian women into these high tech informatics jobs. As such, Caribbean women are seen as integral, not simply to the workings of globalization but as helping to shape its very form. Through the enactment of professionalism in both appearances and labor practices and by insisting that motherhood and work go hand in hand, they re-define the companies' profile of ideal workers and create their own pink collar identities. Through new modes of dress and imagemaking, the informatics workers seek to distinguish themselves from factory workers and to achieve these new modes of consumption, they engage in a wide array of extra income earning activities. Freeman argues that for the new Barbadian pink collar workers, the globalization of production cannot be viewed apart from the globalization of consumption. In doing so, she shows the connections between formal and informal economies and challenges long standing oppositions between first world consumers and third world producers as well as white collar and blue collar labor. Written in a style that allows the voices of the pink collar workers to demonstrate the simultaneous burdens and pleasures of their work, High Tech and High Heels in the Global Economy will appeal to scholars and students in a wide range of disciplines including anthropology, cultural studies, sociology, women's studies, political economy, and Caribbean studies as well as labor and postcolonial studies.
