work their way up through the various levels of an organization is becoming more and more desired by companies. The time it will take you to earn your degree, you could be making a nice living and will have accrued zero debt in the process. Plus, after working in an industry of your choice, something you do have an interest in, even a passion for, you may be on equal footing with a newly hired college grad based on the four years you have been working in your industry of choice as you continue to work your way up through the company. You will find the more value you bring to a company, the more they will look to you to assume great responsibility. Typically, the more responsibility, the greater the paycheck. What makes this book timely is the fact as COVID 19 winds down, we are seeing many labor shortages in many areas and industries. Now is the absolute best time to go to an industry experiencing a labor shortage or enter one of the numerous industries researched in this book and get yourself the job you always wanted without the cost and time involved with getting a four-year college education. I have nothing against getting a degree, and there are still many fields where they will always be mandatory; however, the trades, service industries, government, railroads, law enforcement, plus many others, will welcome you with open arms without the need for a four-year degree. I hope this book helps.

Academic Writing for Geographers James A. Tyner, 2023-08-21

There are many how-to books on writing for academics; none of these, however, relate specifically to the discipline of geography. In this book, the author identifies the principle modes of academic writing that graduate students and early career faculty will encounter, specifically focusing on those forms expected of geographers that are reviewed by academic peers. This book is readily accessible to senior undergraduate and graduate students and early career faculty who may feel intimidated by the process of writing. This volume is not strictly a how-to or step-by-step manual for writing an article or book; rather, through the use of real concrete examples from published and unpublished works, the author demystifies the process of different types of scholarly pieces geographers have to write with the specific needs and challenges of the discipline in mind. Although chapters are thematic based (e.g., stand-alone chapters on book reviews, articles, and books), the manuscript is structured around the concept of story telling, for it is the author's contention that all writing, whether a scientific study or more humanist essay, is a form of story telling.
