BUSINESS experts from China will host three seminars in Ireland next week to advise firms here on how to make the most of the Chinese market.

Experts from the Beijing-based EU-SME Centre will give training to companies looking to do business in the sprawling country.

One of the events will take place in Shannon on Monday next. The others are planned for Dublin and Cork. Shannon Chamber of Commerce chief executive Helen Downes said: "Attendance on the two China-focused seminars we hosted last year was extremely high, so we're delighted that Shannon has been selected as a location for this event."

Centre Director Chris Cheung said: "China is certainly not for everyone. Only by preparing thoroughly and getting to know the country and its people will European companies be able to capitalise on the many opportunities that still abound in the market, especially in regions other than the well-known coastal provinces."

Chinese Economy In Transition:

The Chinese Economy Barry J. Naughton, 2006-10-27 This comprehensive overview of the modern Chinese economy by a noted expert on China's economic development offers a quality and breadth of coverage not found in any other English language text. In The Chinese Economy Barry Naughton provides both an engaging, broadly focused introduction to China's economy since 1949 and original insights based on his own extensive research. The book will be an essential resource for students, teachers, scholars, business people, and policymakers. It is suitable for classroom use for undergraduate or graduate courses. After presenting background material on the pre-1949 economy and the industrialization reform and market transition that have taken place since, the book examines different aspects of the modern Chinese economy. It analyzes patterns of growth and development including population growth and the one-child family policy, the rural economy including agriculture and rural industrialization, industrial and technological development in urban areas, international trade and foreign investment, macroeconomic trends and cycles, and the financial system, and the largely unaddressed problems of environmental quality and the sustainability of growth. The text is notable also for placing China's economy in interesting comparative contexts, discussing it in relation to other transitional or developing economies and to such advanced industrial countries as the United States and Japan. It provides both a broad historical and macro perspective as well as a focused examination of the actual workings of China's complex and dynamic economic development. Interest in the Chinese economy will only grow as China becomes an increasingly important player on the world's stage. This book will be the standard reference for understanding and teaching about the next economic superpower. The Chinese Economy in Transition

Leong H. Liew, 1997 The Chinese Economy in Transition provides an analysis of the economic reforms introduced under Deng Xiaoping. It attempts to answer the question: what was the economic system that the Chinese were trying to reform, and what approach have they adopted to reform it? Whilst the book focuses primarily on economic issues, it also explores the political and social environment and concentrates on three broad areas of the Chinese economy: agriculture, industry, and macroeconomic management. Within these broad areas, the focus is on two major themes: competition and cooperation, and central authority and regional autonomy. This book will be of special interest to senior undergraduate and postgraduate economics students, academics, and China analysts. The Chinese Economy in Transition Kang Chen, 1995

Will China be able to preserve the momentum of its economic reform in the post-Deng Xiaoping era? Will her rising regionalism lead to internal chaos and warlordism? Is China's central government capable of acquiring the much-needed policy instruments to maintain macroeconomic stability? This book seeks to answer these questions by adopting the Public Choice approach to analyse the complex ways in which China's political processes affect economic outcomes during its transition towards the market. The author describes how macro-level policy initiatives affect the behaviour of micro-level actors such as households, enterprises, and localities, and how micro-level behaviour changes in large numbers become unorganised yet powerful.

collective actions which in turn send strong signals to macro level policy makers and thus change the state's policy orientations and result in new state-society relationships. The author argues that new incentives are thereby created and new interest groups are generated to sustain those changes and demand further reform thus making the market transition an irreversible process. The Chinese Economy in Transition, 1989      Demystifying the Chinese Economy Justin Yifu Lin, 2011-10-27 China was the largest and one of the most advanced economies in the world before the eighteenth century yet declined precipitately thereafter and degenerated into one of the world's poorest economies by the late nineteenth century Despite generations efforts for national rejuvenation China did not reverse its fate until it introduced market oriented reforms in 1979 Since then it has been the most dynamic economy in the world and is likely to regain its position as the world's largest economy before 2030 Based on economic analysis and personal reflection on policy debates Justin Yifu Lin provides insightful answers to why China was so advanced in pre modern times what caused it to become so poor for almost two centuries how it grew into a market economy where its potential is for continuing dynamic growth and what further reforms are needed to complete the transition to a well functioning advanced market economy      The Chinese Economy Masahiko Aoki, Jinglian Wu, 2012-10-19 China has enjoyed a higher growth rate for a longer period than any other nation to date This volume brings together leading economists to analyse this unprecedented economic boom and discuss prospects for the future Chapters address a wide range of issues covering not only financial systems but also the social and cultural impact of growth

Empirical Studies of the Chinese Economy in Transition Haiyan Song, 1998      Transforming the Chinese Economy Fang Cai, 2010-05-31 Transforming the Chinese Economy is a translated collection of articles providing a look at how scholars in China have been assessing their country's recent economic history This volume as well as the others in the SSRIC series provide western scholars with an accessible English language look at the state of current Chinese scholarship and as such do not simply provide information for the direct study of economic issues but also for meta level analysis of the interplay of China's policy scholarship and economy Specific topics include banking and finance inequality of growth and women's role in the workforce      Chinese Economy in Disequilibrium Yining Li, 2013-11-25 Known internationally as Mr Shareholding economist Li Yining has had a transformative impact on China's economic transition most notably as an early advocate of ownership reform and in his promotion of shareholding theory By examining the interrelationship between the government enterprises and the market Chinese Economy in Disequilibrium presents an in depth discussion on the issues of resource allocation industrial structure institutional innovation and economic fluctuation in the current Chinese economy under the condition of disequilibrium Credited with developing the theory of economic disequilibrium Professor Li distinguishes two types of disequilibrium on the basis of whether or not the majority of firms in the economy are viable profit makers In Chinese Economy in Disequilibrium Professor Li points out that not only has China's economy been in a state of disequilibrium but it also has issues with enterprises not being under budget constraint Given the limitations of market regulation under economic disequilibrium Professor Li advocates the reform of the enterprise system and upholds the government's leading role in the establishment of order in the socialist commodity economy A number of measures are also proposed with the aim of facilitating the transition of China's economy from disequilibrium to equilibrium The central theme is that the reform and transition are means to serve economic growth and social development which would eventually benefit the ordinary citizens in society Yining Li is a Professor of Economics and Emeritus Dean of Peking University's Guanghua School of Management He is one of China's foremost economists and the author of twenty books and numerous articles on a wide range of economic subjects including reform and development in China He has received a number of prestigious awards and honours for his research As the leading proponent of a market economy in China Professor Li has had a tremendous influence on China's economic reform policy over the last three decades He has served on the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress of China and is currently Vice Chairman of the Economic Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference

Transition and Development in China Mr Yun Chen, 2012-11-28 China's transition from a planned economy to a market economy has succeeded in producing more than a decade of phenomenal growth Whilst similar reforms in countries of Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union have seen an initial downturn in production usually with a significant rise in unemployment the success of the approach taken by China has been remarkable However China embarked upon the process without a well designed blueprint at the outset The resulting piecemeal partial incremental and often experimental approach has proved complicated to implement requiring a complex melding of politics and economics internal and foreign affairs government and market How the difficult task of balancing the diverse array of often competing concerns has been achieved is the subject of this book which examines the dismantling of the centrally planned system and the mechanism of institutional change in Chinese transition
