how transfer are exemplary threats As German enterprises in this industrial sector are popular worldwide and the car industry is the key industry in our country the internationalisation strategies of German automotive companies in China will be analysed in the following The trend of the Chinese automobile market can be summarised in a quote of Dieter Zetsche CEO of Daimler Wir fahren noch nicht im höchsten Gang wir können noch mehr The quote relates to the expected turnover and profit records of Daimler in 2011 which were mainly based on the success in the PRC The Swabian vehicle manufacturer sold 198 500 automobiles in China In spite of these difficulties the automotive market in the PRC is very attractive especially for the well known German firms However the companies should know how to manage the problems in China Therefore the choice of a suitable strategy of internationalisation is crucial By definition internationalisation strategy is the orientation of corporate development by growth in different foreign markets In contrast to an international market entry strategy an internationalisation strategy is not only about starting business in a foreign market but also developing a strategy in a market which has already been entered The focus of this bachelor thesis is put on the passenger vehicle market and lines out why the Chinese market is profitable and attractive for German and international manufacturers in general
