Chinese Textiles:

Chinese Textiles Verity Wilson, 2005-08 Every Chinese textile tells a story and this book tells many stories of Chinese life and legend through the sumptuous textiles that adorn its pages Breathtaking in workmanship colour and design they were made for a purpose and it is those created for celebrations that dominate the selection in this book As well as dealing with technique and influence Wilson tells the story of each piece why it was made and for whom and introduces us to a galaxy of characters from China's history and legend The superb photography allows us to see how richly these textiles reflect the culture from which they come

Chinese Textiles Alan Preist, Pauline Simmons, 1934-10-01 An excellent introduction to the study of Chinese textiles this volume was originally written as a handbook to accompany a special exhibit of Chinese court robes and accessories presented by the Museum in December 1931 In addition to providing an historical background information essential to understanding these beautiful objects specific examples from the Met's collection are discussed in detail

Pictorial Silks 中国丝绸 Kikki Lam 2020-09-02 Prized by Chinese and foreign merchants as an essential commodity along a vast trade network silk served multiple roles throughout the ancient world as fabric for garments as a form of currency and method of tax payment and as a medium and subject matter for professional artists and the literati class Over the centuries silk fabrics have remained synonymous with beauty and are entwined throughout Chinese art and literature Extending from the Qing dynasty to the mid 20th century UMAG's silk textile collection encompasses a diverse range of subjects and formats that include hanging scrolls framed panels banners and robes Each artwork exemplifies the sophisticated craftsmanship of the artisans and the collective stories of the Qing dynasty's textile industry

Chinese Textiles Alan Priest, 1934

When Silk was Gold James C. Y. Watt, Anne E. Wardwell, 1997 The material presented in this volume significantly extends what has been known to date of Asian textiles produced from the Tang 618-907 through the early Ming period late 14th early 15th century and new documentation gives full recognition to the importance of luxury textiles in the history of Asian art Costly silks and embroideries were the primary vehicle for the migration of motifs and styles from one part of Asia to another particularly during the Tang and Mongol 1207-1368 periods In addition they provide material evidence of both the cultural and religious ties that linked ethnic groups and the impetus to artistic creativity that was inspired by exposure to foreign goods

Weaving China's Past Claudia Brown, Robert D. Mowry, 2000 Western admiration of China's silk textiles dates back at least to the days of the Roman empire The establishment of the Chinese republic caused a large number of imperial costumes no longer needed for court ritual to enter collectors hands Textiles curators have studied these in depth yet American museums are just recently beginning to explore the broader topic of Chinese textiles and to present splendid examples of the art along with porcelains bronzes enamels and other decorative art traditions of China Weaving China's Past examines an extraordinary private collection of Chinese textiles of diverse styles functions and techniques The collection is remarkable for its chronological expanse with works ranging in date from the Song

960 1279 and Jin 1115 1234 dynasties through the Qing dynasty 1644 1911 The book examines the relationship of these textiles to the greater fabric of Chinese art Pieces in the collection have been subjected to microscopic examination and radiocarbon dating as well as full examination by a textiles conservator and the results of these studies are included The yarn type thread count weave and supplementary materials are identified Several of the brocades feature gold fibers and these have been analyzed to identify specific techniques A remarkable discovery was the use of peacock feathers twisted with silk fibers in a kesi woven during the Qing dynasty The study of Chinese silk textiles like the study of Chinese ceramics and metalwork offers a glimpse into a complex tradition in which both organized industry and individual creativity played a role Traditional China viewed spinning weaving and embroidery as divinely inspired arts to be practiced dutifully in the home Concurrently however luxury textiles were commissioned for religious state and private use Silk was essential in China's foreign policy used along with gifts of tea and silver to pacify borderlands Together with porcelain silk became a major commodity for export to Europe Elaborate techniques were developed for producing complex designs in both brocade and embroidery During China's later dynasties textile arts were pursued as fine arts appreciated on equal footing with painting and calligraphy

Silks for Thrones and Altars John Vollmer, 2003 SILKS FOR THRONES AND ALTARS presents 77 Chinese textiles from the 14th through the 18th century divided into three groups The first group consists of clothing and furnishing fabrics made for and used by the ruling elite of China Regardless of their dates or the ethnic origins of various dynastic rulers these trappings of nobility served the political and social goals of those in power The second group contains Chinese silks found beyond the borders of the empire specifically in Tibet Japan and Western Europe The presence of Chinese luxury in a foreign context whether the result of commerce or diplomacy affected local ideas of status and prestige The last group presents textiles made for Taoist and Buddhist liturgical use Within the Buddhist traditions of Tibet and Japan secular textiles found new uses without losing the prestige with which they had originally been imbued A catalog of ancient silks and robes from the collection of Myrna and Samuel Myers Includes full page color plates of all the pieces Chinese textiles, Chinese Textiles Alan Priest, 1931 When Silk was Gold James C. Y. Watt, Anne E. Wardwell, Cleveland Museum of Art, Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York, N.Y.), 1997 The demise of the Silk Roads and the end of expansionist policies together with the rapid increase in maritime trade brought to an end the vital economic and cultural interchange that had characterized the years preceding the death of the Ming dynasty Yongle emperor in 1424 Overland intrepid merchants no longer transported silks throughout Eurasia and weavers no longer traveled to distant lands But the products that survive from that wondrous time attest to a glorious era when silk was resplendent as gold Traditional Chinese Clothing Shaorong Yang, 2004 Full color look at the history of traditional and ceremonial clothing in China Trade and Technology Networks in the Chinese Textile Industry Carles Brasó Broggi, 2016-04-29 The aim of this book is to track the historical origins of China's economic reforms From the 1920s and 1930s strong ties were built between Chinese textile industrialists and foreign machinery importers in Shanghai and the Yangzi Delta Despite the fragmentation of China the contribution of these networks to the modernization of the country was important and longstanding Facing the challenge of growing in a fragmented country Chinese textile firms such as Dafeng Dacheng and Lixin focused on urban markets and also on importing technology for upgrading their production When the war against Japan blocked trade routes inside China these networks were concentrated in Shanghai where they envisaged an export oriented development strategy for China that was based on importing machinery and exporting manufactured products However this strategy was only implemented precariously in Shanghai while the city stood as a neutral space in the first years of the Japanese occupation but was only consolidated in Hong Kong in the late 1940s where textile industrialist and most of the foreign importers migrated These networks were thus reestablished in Hong Kong where they contributed to the city's industrialization in the Cold War period Meanwhile the Chinese industrialists that stayed in Shanghai and the Yangzi Delta had to adapt to the Maoist regime and were progressively incorporated into the state owned companies or the local government agencies such as the United Front or the Textile bureaus However from the early 1970s the links between Hong Kong and Shanghai were reactivated and these networks played again a key role in the modernization of China especially regarding the imports of technology and exports of manufactured goods The book ends with the first joint ventures between Hong Kong businessmen and Chinese local administrations that took place in the beginnings of China's economic reforms in 1979

The Competitiveness of the Chinese Textile Apparel Manufacturing Industry Lizette Smook, 2005 A thoroughly researched assessment of the Chinese TAM industry's requirements and necessary actions for attaining and sustaining global competitiveness in the wake of entry to the WTO The author is currently the Asia Regional Technical Manager of Next Asia Ltd and intimately involved with all aspects of the TAM industry This book is an essential tool for all who have an interest in China's current trade growth
