interplay between modernisation programmes and nationalist discourses has shaped China's national project whose membership criteria have evolved historically. By looking specifically at the ascribed roles of China's ethnic minorities and overseas Chinese in successive state-led modernisation efforts, this book offers new perspectives on the changing boundaries of the Chinese nation. It places domestic nation building and transnational identity politics in a single analytical framework and examines how they interact to frame the national project of the Chinese state. By exploring the processes taking place at the ethnic and territorial margins of the Chinese nation state, the author provides a new perspective on China's national modernisation project, clarifying the processes occurring across national boundaries and illustrating how China has negotiated the basis for belonging to its national project under the challenge to modernise amid both domestic and global transformations. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of Asian politics, Chinese politics, nationalism, transnationalism and regionalism.

The Uniqueness of China's Development Model, 1842-2049 Kwok-wah Yip, 2012. The book discusses the development model of China which has now overtaken Japan as the world's second largest economy. This remarkable economic achievement has not followed the Western world's favorite developmental tools of freedom, democracy and a market-driven economy, but rather China's unique model of one-party authoritarian rule with a mixed economy. The Middle Kingdom's way of development has largely questioned the West's core values: freedom and democracy. The book argues that the model is based on the country's 3,000-year-old civilization, forged by the efforts, innovations, trial and error process of several recent generations and guided by the Chinese Communist Party in the past 60 years.

China in Transition Bettina Born, 1995. The China Path to Economic Transition and Development Yinxing Hong, 2016-04-01.

This book by the renowned Chinese scholar Dr Yinxing Hong provides the reader with a perceptive analysis of what has worked in China's development model. Over the past 30 years, China has experienced a remarkable economic rise but it now faces the challenge of switching the drivers of this economic growth which have proven so successful. The path has not been an easy one and many challenges lie ahead. However, the rise of the Chinese economy has been the most significant global development in recent years. Is there a specific Chinese model? How was the Chinese transition from a Soviet-style economic structure to one that is more open to market influences and the global market achieved? In 15 essays, Dr Hong provides fascinating insights to these and other key questions. The essays cover the challenges involved in transition and how the market-oriented reforms progressed, what the consequences of the transition were for public goods provision and how China opened up its economic system. The essays in Part II address the remaining challenges facing rural areas trying to develop a more consumer-driven economic base and how to effectively modify the model of economic development. This book provides a sound basis for policymakers and scholars alike, as well as anyone who wants to get an insider's view of the progress and challenges faced by China's economic development.
