Transcendence and Non-Naturalism in Early Chinese Thought Alexis McLeod, Joshua R. Brown, 2020-09-03 Contemporary scholars of Chinese philosophy often presuppose that early China possessed a naturalistic worldview devoid of any non natural concepts such as transcendence Challenging this presupposition head on Joshua R Brown and Alexis McLeod argue that non naturalism and transcendence have a robust and significant place in early Chinese thought This book reveals that non naturalist positions can be found in early Chinese texts in topics including conceptions of the divine cosmogony and apophatic philosophy Moreover by closely examining a range of early Chinese texts and providing comparative readings of a number of Western texts and thinkers the book offers a way of reading early Chinese Philosophy as consistent with the religious philosophy of the East and West including the Abrahamic and the Brahmanistic religions Co written by a philosopher and theologian this book draws out unique insights into early Chinese thought highlighting in particular new ways to consider a range of Chinese concepts including tian dao li and you wu transformed the legacy of pre imperial philosophy and popular religious movements shook official verities With Mark Csikszentmihalyi s collection readers at last have an accessible eclectic introduction to the key themes of thought during this crucial period Providing clear introductory essays and elegant readable translations Csikszentmihalyi exercises a judicious revisionism by breaking down stereotypes of philosophical orthodoxy and offering a subtler vision of cross fertilization in thought His juxtaposition of texts that reflect very different social milieux and their problems gives a more vivid picture of the Han than has ever before been available in an English language collection The result is a work that should by rights be required reading in intellectual history courses for years to come David Schaberg University of California Los Angeles
