comprehensive theory of animal behaviour emerged through the work of Konrad Lorenz and later by Niko Tinbergen. Biological study of behaviour in fact came of age as a science when Lorenz, Tinbergen and Karl von Frisch received the Nobel Prize for their contribution to science. Observing and describing exactly what animals do is fascinating and scientific analysis of their behaviour is significant for several reasons. Each species tends to have an array of stereotyped behaviours, some of which are shared with related species but others are unique. Ecology, natural selection, macroevolution, microevolution and genes constitute the foundation of animal behaviour. Various animal groups exhibit diverse strategies for survival and reproduction which are discussed in this book.

Male Choice, Female Competition, and Female Ornaments in Sexual Selection Ingo Schlupp, 2021-05-31

When Charles Darwin first proposed Sexual Selection Theory, he suggested two mechanisms: competition among males and choice by females. Although their importance is long established and extremely well understood, their mirror images have remained largely underappreciated: males also choose and females also compete. The combination of male mate choice (MMC) and female competition (FC) may be one of the most overlooked yet important and intriguing phenomena in modern sexual selection theory. This novel text reviews our current understanding of MMC and FC, highlighting the important connections between them. It places both concepts in the context of related fields such as female choice, mating systems and sexual selection theory more broadly. A truly holistic approach is provided which takes all the relevant elements into consideration, especially the relative roles of MMC and FC, female ornamentation, their evolutionary consequences and their genetic basis. Considering male mate choice and female competition in this way as effectively two sides of the same coin creates a powerful paradigm for a more complete understanding of sexual selection. Male Choice, Female Competition, and Female Ornaments in Sexual Selection will be suitable for both graduate students and researchers interested in sexual selection from an evolutionary, psychological and anthropological perspective. It will also appeal to a broader audience of behavioural ecologists and evolutionary psychologists.
