Chlorinated Dioxins And Dibenzofurans In Perspective:

Chlorinated Dioxins and Dibenzofurans in Perspective Christoffer Rappe, 2018-01-31 This volume was developed from the proceedings of a symposium held in Miami Beach at the 189th National Meeting of the American Chemical Society It is the result of the combined efforts of many experts whose efforts have advanced our knowledge of the production analysis distribution effects and control of chlorinated dioxins dibenzofurans and related compounds This is the third in a series of publications originating from current technology presented at national meetings of the American Chemical Society Using this forum as a catalyst researchers from all over the world came together to present and discuss their data and plan future work in this rapidly developing and sometimes highly emotional technical area Polychlorinated Dioxins and Dibenzofurans Christoffer Rappe, 1991 Environmental Health Perspectives, 1985 Toxicological Profile for Chlorinated Dibenzo-p-dioxins, 1998 Environmental Carcinogens Harold Egan, C. Rappe, H. R. Buser, 1991 Polychlorinated Dibenzo-para-dioxins and Polychlorinated Dibenzofurans IARC Working Group on the Evaluation of Carcinogenic Risks to Humans, World Health Organization, International Agency for Research on Cancer, 1997 Evaluates the carcinogenic risks to humans posed by exposure to polychlorinated dibenzo para dioxins PCDDs and polychlorinated dibenzofurans PCDFs PCDDs are formed as inadvertent by products sometimes in combination with PCDFs during the production of chlorophenols and chlorophenoxy herbicides and have been detected as contaminants in these products PCDDs and PCDFs may also be produced in thermal processes such as incineration and metal processing and in the bleaching of paper pulp with free chlorine Of the PCDDs 2 3 7 8 tetrachlorodibenzo para dioxin 2 3 7 8 TCDD or dioxin has attracted the greatest concern PCDDs and PCDFs are ubiquitous in soil sediment and air persist in the environment and accumulate in animal fat Excluding occupational and accidental exposures most human exposure to these compounds occurs from the consumption of meat milk eggs fish and related products Occupational exposures at higher levels have occurred since the 1940s as a result of the production and use of chlorophenols and chlorophenoxy herbicides and for PCDFs in metal production and recycling Even higher exposures have occurred in sporadic industrial accidents and following incidents of rice oil contamination The evaluation which considered abundant human and animal carcinogenicity data found strong evidence from epidemiological studies in humans that exposure to 2 3 7 8 TCDD produces increased risks for all cancer combined rather than for any specific site suggesting that 2 3 7 8 TCDD is an unprecedented multi site carcinogen with no single site predominating Citing data from animal studies and other lines of evidence the monograph concludes that 2 3 7 8 TCDD is carcinogenic to humans Other polychlorinated dibenzo para dioxins and dibenzo para dioxin could not be classified as to their carcinogenicity to humans For PCDFs the evaluation considered evidence from two large poisoning incidents involving rice oil contamination in Japan and Taiwan Although excessive mortality from liver cancer was observed in long term follow up of the Japanese cases the report cited other factors including a high prevalence of chronic hepatitis B infection in the geographical area concerned as possible explanations Evidence of carcinogenicity to human was judged inadequate In the absence of convincing data from experimental animals PCDFs could not be classified as to their carcinogenicity to humans

O'Neill, 1991 This series of volumes aimed at improving exposure measurements deals with a substantial proportion of substances known or suspected to cause human cancer In order to minimize inter laboratory variations and enhance the quality of study designs this series provides the multidisciplinary background for future measurements as a complement to the IARC Monographs series on Evaluation of Carcinogenic Risk and methods for sampling and analysis set out in ISO format Each volume is planned by a review board and emphasis is placed on complementary techniques of biological and environmental monitoring Volume 11 focuses on the large group of isomeric polychlorinated dioxins and dibenzofurans which have attracted universal interest as environmental contaminants The evidence for human carcinogenicity is inadequate but studies on the effects of 2 3 7 8 tetrachlorodibenzodioxin in some experimental animals indicate that it may be among the most potent carcinogens known This volume will describe 10 isomer specific methods of sampling and analysis of this and other dioxins and dibenzofurans in human specimens food soils industrial products and air and ash from incinerators and PCB fires
