Choosing Peace:

Choosing Peace Bridget Moix, 2019-04-24 Despite deep roots in local community organizing and peace activism the peacebuilding field over the past two decades has evolved into a stratified and often disconnected community of academics policymakers and practitioners While the growth into a more recognized and professionalized field has led to significant improvements in how decision makers and influential thinkers accept peace and conflict resolution theory and practice it has also left certain communities behind Individual activists community based groups and locally led civil society organizations in other words the people most directly experiencing the results of violent conflict and striving to overcome and transform it remain notably on the margins of what has become the more recognized international peacebuilding field As a result the inherent links between policies and practices of the global North particularly the United States where much of the professional peacebuilding community is concentrated and the daily realities of rising violence and collapsing order experienced by communities in the global South are glossed over or apportioned to the fields of political science or international affairs Similarly the daily community level efforts of people and groups within the United States and other global North countries seeking to address drivers of violence and injustice in their own communities are largely disconnected from the struggles of communities living inside recognized war zones for a more peaceful and just future These disconnects within the peacebuilding field have increasingly become obstacles to its further evolution and improvement Without a serious shift in direction toward more integrated interconnected and intersectional understanding and approaches the peacebuilding field threatens to become just another Western driven industry in which powerful decision makers politicized funding and large international bureaucracies sustain themselves Reconnecting the field with its roots of community based activism organizing and courageous leadership is urgently needed and a necessary step to improving our collective efforts to build a more peaceful just and sustainable world Drawing on the voices and experiences of community based peace leaders around the world this book envisions a new way of working together as a truly local and global peacebuilding field one in which undoing the roots of violence and injustice is not something that takes place in the field but in the streets of our own neighborhoods and in solidarity with others around the world Loving Each Day for Peacemakers John-Roger, 2002 Designed to be given as a gift and kept close at hand this title provides tools and techniques to create moments of peace anywhere and any time National ads Choosing Peace Ike Lasater, John Kinyon, Julie Stiles, Mary Sitze, 2014-09-16 In Choosing Peace you will learn a new approach to communication and conflict that creates peace internally and externally The concrete tools and skills in this book allow you to be clear in your communication and help others do the same Through practicing what is in this compelling guidebook you can build more satisfying and engaging relationships and create more compassion and peace in your life Publishers note Choose Peace Over Being Right: Let Go Of Battles That Drain You Onyeka Godfrey, 2025-08-05 Not every fight is worth your energy even if you re right This book invites you to choose peace in
