

8. Sensitivity, able to perceive subtleties of others' feelings.	Opaque, can't read people's faces or their feelings between the lines of what they say.	Slow on the uptake. Denies perceptive feelings, but most often after the fact.	Picks up feelings and reads body movements, but sometimes too glibly, which may result in seeing feelings as superficial and manipulatable.	Anticipates responses and picks up group feelings. Aware more than most of the subtle cues, but second-guesses own responses to them.	Master at sensing feelings, anticipating them, and taking them seriously.
9. Involvement, sees oneself as a participating member of an organization.	Never leaves desk, won't go into the field.	Occasionally will appear in the field for ceremonial occasions.	Gets out sporadically, reluctantly, and perfunctorily, and doesn't learn much.	Goes into field regularly but not easily. Seen and touched as but is felt to be distant by employees. Has difficulty drawing people out.	Allocates serious, contributing time to field visits. Moves with employees, seeking information on their problems. Summarizes findings for employees and managers. Has finger on the pulse of the organization.
10. Maturity, has good relationships with authority figures.	Still an adolescent, always challenging bosses and resisting authority.	Armed truce with bosses, speaks up in hostile fashion under guise of honesty or tries to manipulate bosses.	Hard to predict. Sometimes has easy relationships, sometimes uncomfortable, depending on kind of boss.	Usually does well with bosses unless defensiveness is exacerbated by criticism or rivalry.	Works well with authority figures. Uniformly praised by all bosses for smoothness of working relationships with them.
11. Interdependance, accepts appropriate dependency needs of others as well as of him or herself.	Needs continuous direction and well-defined structure.	Can stand alone for a while, but needs to know higher authority is there to fall back on.	Insists on standing alone and denies need for others.	Cooperative, participative but doesn't move ahead of group. Can stand alone but not comfortable doing so.	Stands on own but invites information, criticism, and cooperation from others. Can yield temporarily to lead of more competent, specialized person without feeling loss of leadership role.
12. Articulateneess, makes a good impression.	Clearly upset even when presenting reports in small meetings.	Can present reports but doesn't inspire excitement or confidence. Often displays nervous behavior.	Can make a decent presentation but it's hard work. Doesn't read audience well, seems somehow removed.	Handles him or herself well in public, but has difficulty dealing with hostile questions and untidy audiences.	Extremely presentable, has a wide-ranging vocabulary, inspires audience confidence, senses audience moods. Respected by peers for verbalizing and presenting their problems.
13. Stamina, has physical as well as mental energy.	Low level of involvement and enthusiasm, so runs down fast.	Often starts projects energetically but doesn't maintain interest.	Can work through a significant problem at good energy level.	High level of energy. Requires normal battery recharging.	Consistent high energy level. Always at the ready. Doesn't seem to run out of steam, paces him- or herself well.
14. Adaptability, manages stress well.	Doesn't tolerate stress well. Many physical, personal, and family symptoms.	Can take stress if supported by others. Worries a lot about what might happen.	Does reasonably well under bursts of stress but not long, sustained pressures. Worries in a healthy way about	Can take sustained pressure with normal symptoms. Has effective coping devices, such as consultation with	Takes whatever comes down the pike and seems to thrive on it.
