

HUMAN CHORIONIC GONADOTROPIN

Chorionic Gonadotropin

Michael Brown

Chorionic Gonadotropin:

Human Chorionic Gonadotropin (hCG) Laurence A. Cole, 2014-12-02 Human chorionic gonadotropin hCG is produced during pregnancy by the embryo. It promotes progesterone production by corpus luteal cells. It also functions in pregnancy to promote angiogenesis in uterine vasculature, it immunoblands the invading placental tissue so it is not rejected by the maternal uterine tissues, promotes the growth of the uterus in line with the growth of the fetus, promotes the differentiation of growing cytotrophoblast cells, promotes the quiescence of contractions in the uterine myometrium during the course of pregnancy and also has function in growth and development of fetal organs. The first edition described the detailed biology, clinical chemistry and clinical perspectives of hCG and associated molecules and examines hCG, hyperglycosylated hCG and hCG free subunit 3 separate and independent molecules with totally sovereign physiological functions. The second edition will include coverage of the many new discoveries that have been made in the last five years. hCG analogues may be the actual driving signal of all human cancers. The editor estimates that 40% of the out of date material will be excluded and replaced with 40% of the exciting new findings. The book will also have a much clearer pregnancy and cancer focus. It provides comprehensive information on hCG from basic science to clinical medicine. The second edition will include coverage of the many new discoveries that have been made in the last five years. Updated material with new findings in the field.

Runnebaum, 1984 In 1920 Hirose demonstrated the luteinising effect of placental tissue and one year later Evans and Long described luteinised ovaries in rats treated with hypophysial extracts. In 1926 Zondek and Aschheim as well as Smith independently of each other showed that a gonad stimulating hormone was secreted by the adenohypophysis. In 1927 Aschheim and Zondek found their Prolan in human pregnancy urine and the first reliable pregnancy test was available. In the following years it could be demonstrated that the gonadotropic hormones from pituitary and from pregnancy urine were not of identical structure. During the years 1931-1933 Fevold and coworkers prepared follicle stimulating hormone from sheep pituitaries which were free of other hormone activities. Already in 1934 Collip found antihormones in animals treated with protein hormones from animals of another species. It could be shown that they were antibodies against these hormones and this was the future basis for the immunological era starting in 1960. The quantitative determination of gonadotropins has been performed over several decades by difficult bioassays and since 1960 immunological and later radioimmunological assays became available Since that time a new field was opened for the studies of gonadotropins During this time highly purified preparations of gonadotropins were available for research and clinical treatment I recall the first successful attempt of inducing follicle growth and ovulation by Gemzell and coworkers 1958 as well as by Lunenfeld and Bettendorf at about the same time Linscott's Directory of Immunological and Biological Reagents ,1998 Gonadotropins Harold Harrison Cole,1964 *Abel v.
