

HISTORY OF DOGS

McKINNA PLANT LABS

60 million
years ago

The Miacis animal existed in the Palaeocene epoch era. It looked like a weasel and had much shorter legs and a smaller brain than modern day dogs. It also had the typical distinctive carnivore teeth but walked on the soles of its feet.

35 million
years ago

This was the next stage of canine evolution. The Leptocyon animal existed during the Oligocene epoch era and was more fox-like in its appearance and walked on its toes, enabling it to sprint quicker and easier.

5-7 million
years ago

Then came wolves. These animals developed the advantage of walking on four hind toes allowing them to chase their prey more effectively. By being light on their feet, they can stalk and pounce on their prey.

16 million
years ago

Tomarctus inhabited most of North America. This early type of dog had a long tail which enabled it to balance, sharp claws to take down prey while hunting, and an appearance resembling the modern day dogs of today. As bear dogs started to disappear, Tomarctus further radiated to initiate a line of dogs which filled the hyena-like fruit eating and bone-crushing niches.

20 million

These "bear" dogs existed around 20 million years ago. They looked like a basic dog but had a bigger brain and were more intelligent. They also had a better memory making them more likely to remember family members.

1 million
years ago

Then came wolves and jackals. This animal was the beginning of the early wolf and could be found in Eurasia. All modern day dogs are descendants of the Grey Wolf from the Chihuahua to Great Danes.

30,000
years ago

Dogs became domesticated by living in close proximity to humans. Although some wolves were scared of humans, others were more friendly and interacted with humans and ate their scraps of food. When they gave birth they passed on these friendly traits and even their appearance began to change.

18th century

During the Victorian era, kennel clubs and dog shows standardised dog types into different breeds, with lots of new dogs being bred purely for their appearance. This has led to hundreds of different breeds.

11,000
years ago

Towards the end of the last Ice Age, five ancestral lineages had diversified from each other and were represented through ancient dog samples which were found in the Levant, the Republic of Karelia, Lake Baikal, ancient America, and in New Guinea.

14,000
years ago

The oldest fossils agreed to be associated with domestic dogs were found alongside human remains. This supports the idea that dogs were domesticated by this point and lived closely with humans, being treated as more of a pet than an animal to be feared.

PRESENT DAY

Through thousands of years of coevolution, dogs are great companions for humans and are a true best friend. They share every part of our lives, and where you find humans, you will find a dog. It's difficult to think they were once our arch enemy!

Dogs can also understand human responses, commands, and body language as a result of existing closely with us for so long.

Feral Animals in the American South Abraham H. Gibson, 2016-08-30 The relationship between humans and domestic animals has changed in dramatic ways over the ages and those transitions have had profound consequences for all parties involved As societies evolve the selective pressures that shape domestic populations also change Some animals retain close relationships with humans but many do not Those who establish residency in the wild free from direct human control are technically neither domestic nor wild they are feral If we really want to understand humanity s complex relationship with domestic animals then we cannot simply ignore the ones who went feral This is especially true in the American South where social and cultural norms have facilitated and sustained large populations of feral animals for hundreds of years Feral Animals in the American South retells southern history from this new perspective of feral animals

Our Debt to the Dog Bryan D. Cummins,2013-11-07 When Homo sapiens sapiens met Canis lupus lupus millennia ago the result was Canis lupus familiaris the domestic dog Since that fateful encounter the dog has become arguably humankind s greatest creation The domestic dog is the most widely distributed species other than ourselves in the world being found virtually wherever people live and is also the most diversified of species with literally hundreds of recognized breeds While we have shaped the dog it too has helped shape human history in innumerable ways Our Debt to the Dog is a critical historical and cross cultural examination through the use of case studies of this most improbable 15 000 year relationship and an exploration of how this relationship shaped the history of the world It is also very much an apology to the dog because over the course of the partnership horrific acts were perpetrated against it intentionally and otherwise Our Debt to the Dog enriches our understanding of the dog and extends our appreciation for the profound complexity of past and present human canine relationships and the dog s contributions to our lives and our world

The Behavioural Biology of Dogs Per Jensen,2007 Written by experts in different areas this book presents an up to date account of the behavioural biology of dogs Split in 3 parts the book addresses the specific aspects of behavioural biology The first part deals with the evolution and development of the dog whereas the next part deals with basic aspects of dog behaviour The final part emphasises on the behavioural problems their prevention and cure
