Doing Fieldwork Robert A. Rubinstein, 2017-08-02 Prior to the 1930s the highlands of Guatemala were largely undescribed except in travelogues Just two decades later the highlands had become one of the most anthropologically well investigated areas of the world This is largely due to the research that Robert Redfield and Sol Tax carried out between 1934 and 1941 Separately and together Redfield and Tax anticipated and guided anthropological investigations of people living in peasant and urban communities in other areas of the world Their work helped to define the major outlines of research in the 1970s and since then much writing about the region has been formulated in critical response to the Redfield Tax program Not coincidentally since the mid 1970s anthropology has been caught up in a wave of self doubt about the status of fieldwork and the authority of ethnographic description This critical stance has often cast ethnography as a creative literary enterprise This volume presents a timely view of the process of ethnography as carried out by two of its early practitioners Containing a wealth of ethnographic detail the book reveals how Redfield and Tax developed and tested ethnological hypotheses and it allows us to follow the development of their major theoretical statements The result is an exceptionally clear picture of the process of ethnography Redfield and Tax emerge as rigorous and sensitive observers of social life whose observations bear importantly on contemporary understandings of the ethnology of Guatemala and the enterprise of anthropology This book will be of interest to students of method and theory in ethnography Latin Americanists and other professionals interested in the history of idea

Doing Fieldwork Robert Redfield, Sol Tax, Between 1934 and 1941 Robert Redfield and Sol Tax developed lines of research that anticipated and guided anthropological investigations of people living in peasant and urban communities This book traces the development of their ethnological hypotheses and theoretical statements

The Ethnographic Moment Robert Redfield, 2017-09-08 The first fifty years of the twentieth century were a time of ferment in American anthropology American ethnographic work evolved from the salvage work of professionals affiliated with museums who undertook to document with artifacts and testimony the threatened traditional way of life among the Native American tribes to the establishment of anthropology as a science represented in university departments that sought to describe the ethnographic present of isolated primitive peoples often in distant parts of the world By the beginning of the 1950s cultural anthropology discovered the peasant Robert Redfield himself a leading figure in this paradigm shift challenged anthropology's focus on a static model of the isolated primitive community pointing out the dynamic nature of the little communities he studied in Mesoamerica These were not isolated communities but rather local traditional cultures located well within the sphere of a complex urban culture In order to distinguish the great tradition deriving from urban centers from the little tradition of a more primitive culture Redfield believed anthropology needed to refer to other disciplines such as theology philosophy economics and sociology In other words anthropology had to develop from the collection of material artifacts to a concern with the immaterial realm of values and ideas This collection of essays and previously unpublished papers The Ethnographic Moment tells the story of a remarkable chapter in Redfield's pioneering efforts on what was then an anthropological frontier The present volume covers the years from 1952 to 1958 the last of Redfield's life It focuses solely on his study of peasant communities At the core of the book is his correspondence with the philosopher humanist F G Friedmann who played an important role in Redfield's conceptualization of the complex urban rural continuum that characterizes the peasant's world The volume also includes an autobiographical introduction by Friedmann that illuminates both his own writings and the humanistic background that motivated his study of peasantry

Secrecy and Insurgency Silvia Posocco, 2014-01-31 Secrecy and Insurgency deals with the experiences of guerrilla combatants of the Fuerzas Armadas Rebeldes Rebel Armed Forces in the aftermath of the peace accords signed in December 1996 between the Guatemalan government and guerrilla insurgents Drawing on a broad field of contemporary theory Silvia

Posocco's Secrecy and Insurgency presents a vivid ethnographic account of secrecy as both sociality and a set of knowledge practices. Informed by multi-sited anthropological fieldwork among displaced communities with experiences of militancy in the guerrilla organization Fuerzas Armadas Rebeldes, the book traces the contours of dispersed and intermittent guerrilla social relations, unraveling the gendered dimensions of guerrilla socialities and subjectivities in a local context marked by violence and rapid social change. The chapters chart shifting regimes of governance in the northern departamento of Peten at the inception of violence and insurgency, guerrilla practices of naming and secret relations, moral orders based on sameness and sharing, and forms of relatedness, embodiment, and subjectivity among the combatants. The volume develops new critical idioms for grappling with partiality, perspective, and incompleteness in ethnography and contributes to new thinking on the anthropology of Guatemala. Secrecy and Insurgency will be of interest to social and cultural anthropologists, human geographers, and scholars in Latin American studies, human rights, women's studies, and gender studies.

Peacekeeping Under Fire Robert A. Rubinstein, 2015-11-17 The international community increasingly responds to civil wars, humanitarian crises, and other intrastate conflicts through the instrument of UN peacekeeping. Nearly all of these interventions take place in non-Western areas and involve interactions among militaries and nongovernmental organizations from all around the globe. In this wide-ranging book, Rubinstein draws on decades of his own research on peacekeeping and on other current and historical cases to develop a broad understanding of the roles that culture plays in peacekeeping's success or failure. Peacekeeping under Fire shows that cultural considerations are key elements at all levels of peacekeeping operations. Culture influences what happens between peacekeepers and local populations, how military and nongovernmental organizations interact, and even how missions are planned and authorized. Peacekeeping under Fire analyzes how political symbolism and ritual are critical to peacekeeping and demonstrates how questions of power, identity, and political perception emerge from the cultural context of peacekeeping.

Anthropology and Ethnography are Not Equivalent Irfan Ahmad, 2021-01-14 In recent years, crucial questions have been raised about anthropology as a discipline, such as whether ethnography is central to the subject and how imagination, reality, and truth are joined in anthropological enterprises. These interventions have impacted anthropologists and scholars at large. This volume contributes to the debate about the interrelationships between ethnography and anthropology and takes it to a new plane. Six anthropologists with field experience in Egypt, Greece, India, Laos, Mauritius, Thailand, and Switzerland critically discuss these propositions in order to renew anthropology for the future. The volume concludes with an Afterword from Tim Ingold.

The Politics of Fieldwork Lane Ryo Hirabayashi, 1999 Lane Hirabayashi examines the case of the late Dr Tamie Tsuchiyama Drawing from personal letters ethnographic fieldnotes reports interviews and other archival sources The Politics of Fieldwork describes Tsuchiyama's experiences as a researcher at Poston Arizona aka The Colorado River Relocation Center The book relates the daily life fieldwork methodology and politics of the residents and researchers at the Poston camp as well as providing insight into the pressures that led to Tsuchiyama's ultimate resignation in protest from the JERS project in 1944 A multidisciplinary synthesis of anthropological historical and ethnic studies perspectives The Politics of Fieldwork is rich with lessons about the ethics and politics of ethnographic fieldwork
