of Egypt Gilbert Parker, 2015-06-25 Excerpt from Donovan Pasha and Some People of Egypt It is now twelve years since I began giving to the public tales of life in lands well known to me The first of them were drawn from Australia and the Islands of the Southern Pacific where I had lived and roamed in the middle and late Eighties They appeared in various English magazines and were written in London far from the scenes which suggested them None of them were written on the spot as it were I did not think then and I do not think now that this was perilous to their truthfulness After many years of travel and home staying observation I have found that all worth remembrance the salient things and scenes emerge clearly out of myriad impressions and become permanent in mind and memory Things so emerging are typical at least and probably true Those tales of the Far South were given out with some prodigality About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Donovan Pasha, and Some People of Egypt, Complete Gilbert Parker, 2014-06-12 To the FOREWORD of this book I have practically nothing to add It describes how the book was planned and how at last it came to be written The novel The Weavers of which it was the herald as one might say was published in 1907 The reception of Donovan Pasha convinced me beyond peradventure that the step I took in enlarging my field of work was as wise in relation to my art as in its effect upon my mind temperament and faculty for writing I knew Egypt by study quite as well as I knew the Dominion of Canada the difference being of course that the instinct for the life of Canada was part of my very being itself but there are great numbers of people who live their lives for fifty or seventy or eighty years in a country and have no real instinct for understanding There are numberless Canadians who do not understand Canada Englishmen who know nothing of England and Americans who do not understand the United States If it is so that I have some instinct for the life of Canada and have expressed it to the world with some accuracy and fidelity it is apparent that the capacity for understanding could not be limited absolutely to one environment That I understood Canada could not be established by the fact that I had spent my boyhood there but only by the fact that some inner vision permitted me to see it as it really was That inner vision however if it was anything at all was not in blinders seeing only one section of the life of the world Relatively it might see more deeply more intimately in that place where habit of life had made the man familiar with all its detail but the same vision turned elsewhere to fields where study and sympathy played a devoted part could not fail to see though the workman s craft which made material the vision might fail
