has a rapidly expanding economy and is home to most of the world's population. It is a land of tremendous size and equally great diversity. At times Asia seems to be an economic and military threat to the West while on other occasions it seems to be a valuable partner in the emerging global economy. The technological, political and economic developments that have taken place in Asia are largely the result of Asian higher education. Thus Asian higher education is important not only to the Eastern but also to the Western world. This reference book surveys the state of higher education in Asia and thus provides a valuable perspective on changes in Eastern society. An introductory essay discusses the current state of Asian higher education and provides a useful context for the rest of the work. The remainder of the book contains alphabetically arranged entries on higher education in twenty representative Asian countries. Some of the countries like China and India have enormous populations. Others like Japan and Singapore have witnessed tremendous economic prosperity. And some like Iran and North Korea have great political significance. Each entry is written by an expert contributor and provides background information, a discussion of current issues and an examination of future trends. Entries cite current literature and research and the volume concludes with an extensive bibliography.

Higher Education and the Labour Market Robert M. Lindley, 1981. This publication is the first from the Leverhulme program of study which focused on the major strategic options likely to be available to higher education institutions and policy making bodies in the 1980s and 1990s. It resulted from a specialist seminar on higher education and the labor market. The chapters are: Employers' Perceptions of Demand; Laurence C. Hunter, Technological Manpower; Derek L. Bosworth, Response to Change in the United States; Richard B. Freeman, Higher Education Policy; Maurice Peston, and The Challenge of Market Imperatives; Robert M. Lindley. Lindley notes that the British higher education system has never come to grips with the role it might play in economic development and examines some areas of need and improvement: the search for more students; the need to get the labor market more involved in the environment of higher education; and to get education to respond to market need with qualified persons; the role of higher education in the screening and credentialism process to encourage industry's role in funding and organizing higher education; and stabilizing the labor market environment. It is concluded that labor market issues have to be handled at a more sophisticated level than the debate about manpower alone.
