Gunnar,Michael Maratsos,2014-02-25 One of the central problems in the study of modern cognition is the degree to which higher cognition is modularized that is how much are higher functions carried out by domain specific specialized cognitive subsystems rather than a highly general cognitive learning and inferring device To date ideas and proposals about modularity have been best developed in the study of vision and grammar In the present volume the usefulness of approaches employing modularity and domain specificity are further explored in papers on the development of biological thought word meaning symbols and emotional development as well as in the core area of grammar itself by leading researchers in these fields The volume also contains an introduction to some basic ideas and concepts in the study of modularity and domain specificity and some critical discussion of the overall problems of the modularity constraints approach to analyzing development The Communicative Competence of Young Children Susan Foster-Cohen,2014-01-27 How children first acquire language is one of the central issues in linguistics This book draws on a wide range of research including work in developmental psychology anthropology and sociology to explore the processes behind child language acquisition to the preschool period Social Environment and Cognition in Language Development F. Nihan Ketrez,Aylin C. Küntay,Şeyda Özçalışkan,Aslı Özyürek,2017-07-18 Language development is driven by multiple factors involving both the individual child and the environments that surround the child The chapters in this volume highlight several such factors as potential contributors to developmental change including factors that examine the role of immediate social environment i e parent SES parent and sibling input peer interaction and factors that focus on the child s own cognitive and social development such as the acquisition of theory of mind event knowledge and memory The discussion of the different factors is presented largely from a crosslinguistic framework using a multimodal perspective speech gesture sign The book celebrates the scholarly contributions of Prof Ayhan Aksu Ko a pioneer in the study of crosslinguistic variation in language acquisition particularly in the domain of evidentiality and theory of mind This book will serve as an important resource for researchers in the field of developmental psychology cognitive science and linguistics across the globe

The Social and Cognitive Aspects of Normal and Atypical Language Development Stephen von Tetzchner, Linda S. Siegel, Lars Smith, 1989 For some time now the study of cognitive development has been far and away the most active discipline within developmental psychology Although there would be much disagreement as to the exact proportion of papers published in developmental journals that could be considered cognitive 50% seems like a conservative estimate Hence a series of scholarly books devoted to work in cognitive development is especially appropriate at this time The Springer Series in Cognitive Development contains two basic types of books namely edited collections of original chapters by several authors and original volumes written by one author or a small group of authors The flagship for the Springer Series is a serial publication of the advances type carrying the subtitle Progress in Cognitive Development Research Each volume in the Progress sequence is strongly thematic in that it is limited to some well defined domain of cognitive developmental research e g logical and mathematical development development of learning All Progress volumes will be edited collections Editors of such collections upon consultation with the Series Editor may elect to have their books published either as contributions to the Progress sequence or as separate volumes All books written by one author or a small group of authors are being published as separate volumes within the series

The Intentionality Model and Language Acquisition Lois Bloom,Erin Tinker,2001-12-21 The Intentionality Model builds on the child s engagement in a world of persons and objects the effort that learning language requires and the essential tension between engagement and effort that propels language acquisition According to this perspective children learn language in acts of expression and interpretation they work at acquiring language all aspects of a child s development contribute to this process Provides results of a longitudinal study which examined language acquisition in the second year of life in the context of developments in cognition affect and social connectedness Results of lag sequential analyses are reported to show how different behaviors words sentences emotional expressions conversational interactions and construction thematic relations between objects in play converged both in the stream of children s actions in everyday events in real time an in developmental time between the emergence of words at about 13 months and the transition to simple sentences at about 2 years of age The conclusions show that performance counts for explaining language acquisition language is not acquired independently but in relation to other behaviors acquiring language is not easy and requires the work of behavioral coordination
