Coordination Without Hierarchy Informal Structures In Multiorganizational Systems:

Coordination Without Hierarchy Donald Chisholm, 1989 The organizational history of American government during the past 100 years has been written principally in terms of the creation of larger and larger public organizations Beginning with the Progressive movement no matter the goal the reflexive response has been to consolidate and centralize into formal hierarchies That efficiency effectiveness and accountability and the coordination necessary to achieve them are promoted by such reorganizations has become widely accepted Borrowing from social psychology sociology political science and public administration and using the public transit system of the San Francisco Bay area for illustrative purposes Donald Chisholm directly challenges this received wisdom He argues that contrary to contemporary canons of public administration we should actively resist the temptation to consolidate and centralize our public organizations Rather we should carefully match organizational design with observed types and levels of interdependence since organizational systems that on the surface appear to be tightly linked webs of interdependence on closer examination often prove decomposable into relatively simpler subsystems that may be coordinated through decentralized informal organizational arrangements Chisholm finds that informal channels between actors at different organizations prove remarkably effective and durable as instruments of coordination Developed and maintained as needed rather than according to a single preconceived design informal channels along with informal conventions and contracts tend to match interorganization interdependence closely and to facilitate coordination Relying on such measures reduces the cognitive demands and obviates the necessity for broadscale political agreement typical of coordination by centralized formal organizations They also advance other important values that are frequently absent in formally consolidated organizations such as reliability flexibility and the representation of varied interests Coordination Without Hierarchy is an incisive penetrating work whose conclusions apply to a wide range of public organizations at all levels of government It will be of interest to a broad array of social scientists and policymakers In an earlier version Coordination Without Hierarchy received the American Political Science Association 1985 Leonard D White Award for the best doctoral dissertation in the field of public administration including broadly related problems of policy formation and administrative theory

Improving Governance Laurence E. Lynn (jr.), Carolyn J. Heinrich, Carolyn J. Hill, 2001 Policymakers and public managers around the world have become preoccupied with the question of how their goals can be achieved in a way that rebuilds public confidence in government Yet because public policies and programs increasingly are being administered through a complicated web of jurisdictions agencies and public private partnerships evaluating their effectiveness is more difficult than in the past Though social scientists possess insightful theories and powerful methods for conducting empirical research on governance and public management their work is too often fragmented and irrelevant to the specific tasks faced by legislators administrators and managers Proposing a framework for research based on the premise that any particular governance arrangement is embedded in a wider social fiscal and political context Laurence E Lynn Jr Carolyn J Heinrich and Carolyn J Hill argue that theory based empirical research when well conceived and executed can be a primary source of fundamental durable knowledge about governance and policy management Focusing on complex human services such as public assistance child protection and public education they construct an integrative multilevel logic of governance that can help researchers increase the sophistication power and relevance of their work
