

An aerial photograph of a tropical landscape. A dark, winding river flows through the center of the image, surrounded by lush green forested hills. The terrain is rugged with visible ridges and valleys. In the top left corner, there is a small white rectangular area containing a series of black dots, resembling a barcode or a registration mark.

Controlling Tropical Deforestation:

Controlling Tropical Deforestation Alan Grainger, 2013-11-05 Tropical rain forest is being cleared so rapidly and on such a scale that it is a major global environmental problem threatening the survival of half of the world's plant and animal species and contributing to global climate change through the greenhouse effect. But despite widespread concern for over twenty years only limited progress has been made in controlling deforestation and improving forest management in the humid tropics. In this book Alan Grainger offers a fresh analysis of the causes of deforestation and presents an integrated strategy for controlling it. His strategy embraces agriculture, forestry and conservation and stresses the need for changes in government policies if land use is to be made more sustainable and the underlying causes of the problem are to be addressed. Controlling Tropical Deforestation is essential reading for policy makers, agronomists, foresters, conservationists and development professionals. To general readers and students on introductory courses at schools and universities it also offers the first concise but comprehensive overview of the causes, scale and consequences of deforestation. Alan Grainger is a lecturer in geography at the University of Leeds. He is author of The Threatening Desert: Controlling Desertification also published by Earthscan. Originally published in 1992. Controlling Tropical Deforestation A. GRAINGER, 1993. Controlling Tropical Deforestation Robert T. Deacon, 1992. A simple general equilibrium model representing salient aspects of the deforestation process generates first and second best policy options for controlling deforestation and helps to assess the environmental consequences of government policies often cited in the literature on deforestation. Controlling Tropical Deforestation Paul Glewwe, 2017. The Tropical Timber Trade Regime F. Gale, 1998-09-14. Gale explains why international negotiations have not produced a sustainable solution to tropical rainforest degradation. Using an innovative critical approach to international regimes, the author analyzes the structure and operation of the International Tropical Timber Organization (ITTO). He shows how the timber industry and producing and consuming country governments created a blocking alliance that favoured developmentalist interests and ideas. The ITTO bolstered this alliance by permitting environmentalists merely to voice but not to negotiate their concerns. Forestry in a Global Context Roger Sands, 2013-11-12. From the time of hunter-gatherers to the present day, forests have played a vital role in the development of humanity and society. This broad introductory textbook sets world forestry in a social, environmental, historical and economic context. The development of forests, grassland and humans is described from the Devonian through to the Age of Agriculture, covering the factors determining the distribution of forests, the classification of forest types, the value and benefits of the forest and the products of the forest and their associated trade. The book also explores issues such as sustainable forest management, current patterns of deforestation and reforestation and future challenges facing our forests. Fully updated throughout and with new contributions from international experts, this second edition includes new chapters on climate change and international forest policy and expanded coverage of forest products and bioenergy production. World Forests, Society and Environment

Matti Palo, J. Uusivuori, 2012-12-06 This book addresses current global and regional issues concerning the world's forests, societies and the environment from an independent and non-governmental point of view. A main message is that cooperation on a global scale is not only commendable but essential if solutions to the problems facing the world's forests are to be found. To achieve this, modern science needs to find a clearer picture of relationships between forests, human activity and the environment and of the consequences of environmental change for the ability of societies to survive.

Part I: Editorial Perspectives is analyzing the ongoing globalization processes of forests, societies and the environment. Part II: Society and Environment reviews worldwide trends with significance for the future of forests and forestry. While the trends are influenced by forest sector issues, that sector is influenced to a much larger extent by external factors such as demography, urbanization or technological development. Part III: Importance of Forests looks at the value of the goods and services of forests, tangible and intangible, market and non-market, and concludes that failure to recognize their full value is one of the crucial impediments to sustainable development. In Part IV: Global Forum, scientists take up global forestry themes: deforestation, trade and the environment, climate change, biodiversity, with the aim of stimulating wider discussion. Part V: Regional Forum looks at major themes of particular relevance to Africa, Asia, Pacific, Latin America, North America and Europe, such as farm and agroforestry, corruption and concessions, urban forestry and environmental conflicts. Part VI introduces the special theme: forest sectors in transition economies. Teams of scientists from Russia and China focus on the implications of the transition from plan to market economy, illuminating both the very different nature of the forest sector in the two countries and the different transition paths that they have adopted. In the past millennium, the entire world has been discovered. In the past half century, the contribution of forests to the economy worldwide has been perceived, while only recently have their societal and environmental benefits been globally recognized. Globalization is a demanding process requiring knowledge and information. This book offers knowledge, facts and information but also values from diverse human and cultural perspectives about world forests, society and environment to help us towards equity in our use of the global forest to create a clearer vision on a unasyilva.

The Globalization of Environmental Crisis Jan Oosthoek, Barry K. Gills, 2013-10-31 Previously published as a special issue of Globalizations, this collection of essays addresses what is arguably the most pressing and urgent issue of our day: the continuing development of global environmental crises and the need for new and urgent responses to them by the world community. The contributors include social scientists, environmental historians, anthropologists and science policy researchers, and together they give an overview of the history of the globalization of environmental crisis over the past several decades, both in terms of the science of measurement and the types of policy and public responses that have emerged to date. The specific issue areas addressed in the book cover a wide range of topics including international environmental governance, North-South inequalities, climate change, global warming, tropical forests, air pollution, economic and paradigm shifts, sustainability, indigenous peoples and eco-conservation, EU environmental policy, the United States and politicized
