Cooperative Interfaces To Information Systems:

Cooperative Interfaces to Information Systems Leonard Bolc, Matthias Jarke, 2012-12-06 Information systems are large repositories of factual and inferential knowledge intended to be queried and maintained by a wide variety of users with different backgrounds and work tasks The community of potential information system users is growing rapidly with advances in hardware and software technology that permit computer communications support for more and more application areas Unfortunately it is often felt that progress in user interface technology has not quite matched that of other areas Technical solutions such as computer graphics natural language processing or man machine man communications in office systems are not enough by themselves They should be complemented by system features that ensure cooperative behavior of the interfaces thus reducing the training and usage effort required for successful interaction In analogy to a human dialog partner we call an interface cooperative if it does not just accept user requests passively or answer them literally but actively attempts to understand the users intentions and to help them solve their application problems This leads to the central question addressed by this book What makes an information systems interface cooperative and how do we provide capabilities leading to cooperative interfaces Many answers are possible A first aspect concerns the formulation and acceptance of user requests Many researchers assume that such requests should be formulated in natural language

Human Factors in Analysis and Design of Information Systems Anthony Finkelstein, Michael J. Tauber, Roland Traunmüller, 1990 Information systems may be regarded as an interaction of people and machines In the past however human factors took second place Nowadays the need to provide i a functionality that meets the user s needs and ii an ergonomic human machine interface which takes the way people would like to solve their tasks into consideration are both recognised as primary concerns by the designers of information systems The two major themes of this book are as follows As new methods and rigorous techniques come into use the proportion of information systems development effort devoted to analysis and design is set to increase and the study of human factors also to increase in importance Methods representation schemes tools and environments cannot be applied without a systematic understanding of their use by analysts and designers in development teams The book presents research results in this area Much study in software development has concentrated on a human factors perspective of the end user However this work has to be placed in the overall context of systematic analysis and design of information systems The book presents some new developments
