Desolation And Enlightenment Political Knowledge After Total War Totalitarianism And The Holocaust:

Desolation and Enlightenment, 2004 Desolation and Enlightenment Ira Katznelson, 2020-10-13 During and especially after World War II a group of leading scholars who had been perilously close to the war's devastation joined others fortunate enough to have been protected by distance in an effort to redefine and reinvigorate liberal ideals for a radically new age. Treating evil as an analytical category they sought to discover the sources of twentieth century horror and the potentialities of the modern state in the wake of desolation. In the process they devised strikingly new ways to understand politics, sociology and history that reverberate still. In this major intellectual history, Ira Katznelson examines the works of Hannah Arendt, Robert Dahl, Richard Hofstadter, Harold Lasswell, Charles Lindblom, Karl Polanyi and David Truman, detailing their engagement with the larger project of reclaiming the West's moral bearing. In light of their epoch's calamities, these intellectuals insisted that the tradition of Enlightenment thought required a new realism, a good deal of renovation and much recommitment. This array of historians, political philosophers and social scientists understood that a simple reassertion of liberal modernism had been made radically insufficient by the enormities and moral catastrophes of war, totalitarianism and the Holocaust. Confronting dashed hopes for reason and knowledge, they asked not just whether the Enlightenment should define modernity but also which Enlightenment we should wish to have.

Hannah Arendt and the Uses of History

Richard H. King, Dan Stone, 2007-12-01 Hannah Arendt 1906-1975 first argued that there were continuities between the age of European imperialism and the age of fascism in Europe in The Origins of Totalitarianism 1951. She claimed that theories of race, notions of racial and cultural superiority and the right of superior races to expand territorially were themes that connected the white settler colonies, the other imperial possessions and the fascist ideologies of post-Great War Europe. These claims have rarely been taken up by historians. Only in recent years has the work of scholars such as Jürgen Zimmerer and Dirk Moses begun to show in some detail that Arendt was correct. This collection does not seek merely to expound Arendt's opinions on these subjects; rather, it seeks to use her insights as the jumping off point for further investigations, including ones critical of Arendt, into the ways in which race, imperialism, slavery and genocide are linked and the ways in which these terms have affected the United States, Europe and the colonised world.

Becoming a Social Science Researcher

Bruce Parrott, 2023-03-28 Becoming a Social Science Researcher is designed to help aspiring social scientists, including credentialed scholars, understand the formidable complexities of the research process. Instead of explaining specific research techniques, it concentrates on the philosophical, sociological and psychological dimensions of social research. These dimensions have received little coverage in guides written for social science researchers, but they are arguably even more important than particular analytical techniques. Truly sophisticated social science scholarship requires that researchers understand the intellectual and social contexts in which they collect and interpret information. While social science training in US graduate schools has become more systematic over the past two decades, graduate training and published guidance still fall short in addressing this fundamental need Sociology Confronts the Holocaust Judith M. Gerson, Diane L. Wolf, 2007-07-11 There is an enormous amount of scholarship on the Holocaust and there is a large body of English language sociological research Oddly there is not much overlap between the two fields This text covers both fields The Antioch Review John Donald Kingsley, 2004 The Journal of Philosophy, 2003 Theodor Adorno's Negative Dialectics and the Reconstruction of German Philosophy Eric Oberle, 2005 Education and the Cold War Andrew Hartman, 2008-02-15 Shortly after the Russians launched Sputnik in 1957 Hannah Arendt quipped that only in America could a crisis in education actually become a factor in politics The Cold War battle for the American school dramatized but not initiated by Sputnik proved Arendt correct The schools served as a battleground in the ideological conflicts of the 1950s Beginning with the genealogy of progressive education and ending with the formation of New Left and New Right thought Education and the Cold War offers a fresh perspective on the postwar transformation in U S political culture by way of an examination of the educational history of that era American Dreams and Nazi Nightmares Kirsten Lise Fermaglich, 2006 A unique contribution to America's encounter with Holocaust memory that links the use of Nazi imagery to liberal politics Why Nations Go to War John George Stoessinger, 2005 This book is intended for International Relations World Politics Global Issues and History courses that deal with issues of war and peace Morgenthau William E. Meilleur, 2004 Working from the pragmatic instrumentalism of John Dewey I argue that the positivist temper of mainstream political science and the theory driven nature of that mainstream's critics their shared preoccupation with methodologically established disciplinary identities and their underdeveloped understanding of public scholarship have together left both the empirical and the normative study of politics disengaged from politics and public life After describing Dewey's reconstructive method of political inquiry and defending its central and intrinsic commitment to expansive and participatory democracy I review the history of the development of the mainstream positivist temper showing that while it responded to real political and intellectual problems its proponents depended on a narrow and severely flawed set of models of science Their opponents however took these models as given and simply rejected the application of science to politics leading to their own form of detachment from empirical engagement with politics This fruitless division of tendencies has been more or less frozen into political science since the 1970s Using case studies of public opinion research and public deliberation theory I conclude that political science as it is now has failed our aspirations meaningfully to contribute to democratic politics and on its own terms to advance political inquiry I argue for a painkilling political science based on Dewey's reconstructive theory of inquiry and a view of public scholarship as contributing to the conditions under which solutions to the problems of the day can emerge rather than having necessarily to craft those solutions ourselves This would entail a political science defined not as a discipline around a set of methods but as a profession around inquiry into a set of political problems questions about structures of power legitimacy public deliberation and collective judgment

Political Science Quarterly ,1931 A review devoted to the historical statistical and comparative study of politics economics and public law Realist Strategies of Republican Peace Vibeke Schou Tjalve,2008-03-15 This book s central claim is that although Niebuhr and Morgenthau were critics of what they referred to as utopian thought the core of their criticism constituted an attack on the inability of utopianism to produce politically stimulating and democratically mobilizing utopias In their minds utopianism was rhetorically barren and imaginatively sterile as a political narrative the inability of which to move and dedicate its citizenry ultimately led to conformity and homogeneity Arguing that the same sterility is present in current visions of democracy traditional as well as radical the book seeks to render Niebuhr and Morgenthau s attempt at re opening the democratic imagination relevant for contemporary purposes as well Internationale Bibliographie der Rezensionen wissenschaftlicher Literatur ,2007 Feminist Periodicals ,2006 Program of the Annual Meeting - American Historical Association American Historical Association,2006 Some programs include also the programs of societies meeting concurrently with the association
