

Reading Efficiently: The Sub-Skills of Reading

Introduction

In real life, people read a variety of texts for both information and pleasure. Reading materials differ in content, style and purpose, and we adjust our reading style accordingly. To become efficient readers, we have to train ourselves to read different texts in different ways. For example, we do not read a novel and a textbook in preparation for an examination in the same way. When we are reading a novel, we do not need to pay attention to every detail the way we do when reading a textbook and read more quickly; most speed reading involves a process called chunking. Instead of reading each word, the reader takes words in "chunks," — that is, groups of words that make a meaningful unit, such as phrases, clauses or even whole sentences. And, as adults, most of our reading is silent. When we read silently, we save the time spent on articulating words, and read in chunks or sense groups instead of one word at a time.

In this unit, we will try to help you make your students aware of the various sub-skills and strategies we use to read different texts with efficiency. Reading efficiently, as you have already seen in Units 1 and 2, means adjusting one's reading speed and style to match the purpose for which we read. This involves reading for an overall idea or gist, specific information and detail, and to understand the writer's attitude. This unit will give you some information about various sub-skills of reading, and how students can be trained to use these sub-skills to read actively.

Unit outcomes

Upon completion of this unit you will be able to:

Outcomes

- help your students understand the relation between reading purpose and reading strategy;
- give your students practice in the sub-skills of skimming for an overall idea and scanning for specific information;
- help your students understand text structure, so that they can distinguish main ideas and digression, if any; and
- help your students develop their reading efficiency by modifying their reading strategies.

Terminology

Scanning:

Searching quickly for a specific piece of information or a particular word in a dictionary, an address in a directory or the flight arrival schedule passages. We search for the keywords or ideas because we know what we want and eyes quickly down the page seeking specific words and phrases.

Skimming:

Reading through a text quickly to get an overall idea of the content (e.g., before buying a book we glance quickly at the cover page, the review on the back jacket), the contents page, etc., to get a general idea of its content.

Book corner:

A special area in the classroom set aside for a collection of non-fiction books for a particular age group.
