Policy Research Institutes' Role in the Development of Evidence for Evidence-based Policy Making in the United States Richard V. Burkhauser,Susan V. Burkhauser,2023 Policy Research Institutes in the United States play an important role in the creation of evidence for evidence based policymaking This is the case with respect to their advocacy for the gathering and broad dissemination of Big Data and in the publication of policy analysis in the academic literature using these data But they play a much more significant role via non refereed working papers in predicting the possible behavioral and distributional consequences of currently proposed policies being considered by the Executive and Legislative branches of government Historically however Policy Research Institutes both inside and outside the beltway have also played a less well understood role It is the nurturing of those mostly academic based economists who as Members of the Council of Economic Advisers eventually end up advising Presidents of the United States and their staff on the state of economic knowledge on the economic problems that these policy makers are called to solve via evidence based policymaking

Defense White Paper ,1989

The Politics of Urban Development Clarence Nathan Stone,Heywood T. Sanders,1987 In the past twenty years the study of urban politics has shifted from a predominant concern with political culture and ethos to a preoccupation with political economy particularly that of urban development Urban scholars have come to recognize that cities are shaped by forces beyond their boundaries From that focus have emerged the views that cities are clearly engaged in economic competition that market processes are shaped by national policy decisions sometimes intentionally and sometimes inadvertently and that the costs and benefits of economic growth are unevenly distributed But what else needs to be said about the policies and politics of urban development To supplement prevailing theories The Politics of Urban Development argues that the role of local actors in making development decisions merits closer study Whatever the structural constraints politics still matters Collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population The impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference

Development* Sandrine Cazes, Sher Verick,2013 In developing countries labour markets play a central role in determining economic and social progress since employment status is one of the key determinants of exiting poverty and promoting inclusion Yet the reality in most developing countries is that the labour market fails to create the jobs in the formal economy that would help individuals and their families prosper In recognition of these challenges governments and other stakeholders in developing countries have increasingly prioritised policies and programmes to promote decent work However this requires navigating a range of complex issues and debates surrounding the linkages between development processes and labour market outcomes This volume consists of three main thematic parts Part I provides a broad overview of key issues including characterising the employment challenge in developing countries and the link between economic growth distribution poverty and employment Drawing on the literature and country examples Part II analyses the specific topics of wages migration and education The final section shifts to a more normative focus addressing labour market institutions and policies along with systematic approaches to quantifying labour markets in developing countries Perspectives on Labour Economics for Development is an invaluable reference for policy makers in middle and low income countries as well as an ideal handbook for teachers and students of economics and development
