Mass Media in 2025 Erwin Kenneth Thomas, Brown H. Carpenter, 2001-08-30 The future of mass media may appear unpredictable and too complex to fathom but Mass Media in 2025 takes a scholarly theoretical approach to identifying trends and explaining their possibilities Noted contributors approach a variety of media with a solid grounding in the history of each and an eye for which may be vulnerable and which may thrive in the new technological age Trends such as interactivity and niche building will affect everything from the newspaper to public relations and this collection of essays provides a fascinating guide to where the next decades may take us Regardless of the visual aural or printed form Mass Media in 2025 illustrates the degree to which older media will have to incorporate the level of interaction and specialization offered by newer media if they are to survive These effects can already be seen in the proliferation of television channels in the ironic bent of advertising in the rise of infotainment in news organizations This book shows not only how all of this has come to be but also more importantly where it will go

Huff, 2001-05-30 This comprehensive study examines the case of AM stereo and subsequent technologies to demonstrate the FCC's evolution from stern to reluctant regulator It also examines emerging technologies such as multichannel television sound digital audio broadcasting and high definition television and discusses their impact on the evolution of broadcast regulation In the 1980s the tension between governmental control and the marketplace resulted in the FCC's deregulation of TV and radio electing to set only technical operating parameters and allowing legal operation of any system that meets those minimal standards Huff argues that this approach is likely to influence regulatory approaches to other new developments in broadcast technologies The extensive overview of the industry and the study of the interrelationships between the technologies will appeal to communication scholars in the fields of radio and television as well as interest industry professionals
