Development And Rights:

The Right to Development Centre for Development and Human Rights, 2004-05-25 The Right to Development (RTD) is a concept that emerged in the 1970s and is one of the most debated and contentious issues in international relations. RTD builds on the rights-based approach to development, seeking to integrate the norms and principles of human rights with policies and plans to promote development. Despite its importance for the world's poor and dispossessed, a great deal of definitional confusion still surrounds the concept. This primer introduces the concept of RTD as well as discusses its practical application in the Indian setting. It is divided accordingly into two sections: the first of which traces the origins and the evolution of the idea of RTD. This section identifies the defining parameters and content of RTD and focuses especially on the three rights: the rights to food, education and health that have been identified as a good starting point for the implementation of RTD. The last chapter in this section underscores the importance of women's rights in order to emphasise the need to focus on safeguarding and promoting the human rights of vulnerable groups. Part II covers substantially the Indian situation relating to RTD. The first chapter in this section provides an overview of the legal and institutional mechanism in India for the protection of human rights in general and women's rights in particular. The next chapter examines the implementation of the rights to food, health and education. The last chapter in this section details the functioning of Public Interest Litigation (PIL) which has emerged in recent years as an important mechanism for securing social justice and the challenges and limitations of this mechanism.

Human Rights Indicators in Development Siobhan McNerney-Lankford, Hans-Otto Sano, 2010-10-26 Human rights indicators are central to the application of human rights standards in context and relate essentially to measuring human rights realization both qualitatively and quantitatively. They offer an empirical or evidence-based dimension to the normative content of human rights legal obligations and provide means of connecting those obligations with empirical data and evidence and in this way relate to human rights accountability and the enforcement of human rights obligations. Human rights indicators are important both for assessment and diagnostic purposes: the assessment function of human rights indicators relates to their use in monitoring accountability, effectiveness and impact while the diagnostic purposes relates to measuring the current state of human rights implementation and enjoyment in a given context, whether regional, country-specific or local. This paper offers a preliminary review of the foregoing in the development context and a general perspective on the significance of human rights indicators for development processes and outcomes. It is not intended to be prescriptive and does not provide specific operational recommendations on the use of human rights indicators in development projects. Nor does it advocate a particular approach or mode of integrating human rights in development or argue for a rights-based approach to development. This paper is designed to provide development practitioners with a preliminary view on the possible relevance, design and use of human rights indicators in development policy and practice. It also introduces a basic conceptual framework about the relationship between rights and development including in the World Bank context and surveys a range of methodological approaches on human rights measurement exploring in general terms different types of human rights indicators and their potential implications for development at three different levels of convergence or integration Human Rights Centered Development Maria Socorro I. Diokno, 2004 Defeating poverty is one of the greatest challenges many countries face today Countries throughout the world pursue development strategies plans and policies which have thus far been unsuccessful in uplifting the poor from their misery and vulnerability Perhaps what is missing in current development efforts is a focus not on macroeconomic indicators but on the human persons in society and the full integration of human rights norms and standards into all phases of development Human Rights Centered Development provides a framework for development policy planning budgeting and programming that focuses on human rights It contains human rights tools for analysis that may be applied to all aspects of the development process It presents human rights norms and standards in simplified checklists outlines and diagrams This manual offers the possibility of truly defeating poverty Guidebook Series on Alternative Regulatory Approaches: Marketable rights, 1981 Karst

Groundwater Contamination and Public Health William B. White, Janet S. Herman, Ellen K. Herman, Marian Rutigliano, 2017-09-06 This book sheds new light on contaminant transport in karst aquifers and the public health implications of contaminated karst groundwater The papers included were presented at a conference held in early 2016 in San Juan Puerto Rico and range from lengthy reviews on contaminant transport mechanisms to short articles summarizing research findings The conference addressed a variety of topics such as contamination sources the hydrogeology of contaminant transport the storage and release of contaminants and the health impacts as well as the epidemiology of contaminated water supplies drawn from karst aquifers and gathered perspectives from experts in different disciplines including hydrogeologists and public health specialists Although there is a wealth of literature on specific instances of karst groundwater contamination this book offers an integrated conceptual framework for the public health impacts of karst groundwater making it a valuable resource for a broad interdisciplinary readership Development and Rights Christian Lund, 1999 Nine essays explore the question of universalism and cultural relativism of rights refuse to adopt either stance absolutely and advocate less extreme positions They also consider how rights are claimed and contested vindicated and politicized and how they transform social practice in different ways The case studies most from Africa focus on the legal dimensions and how people in concrete circumstances engage in political struggles that are framed partly in terms of rights Distributed in the US by ISBS Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR Human Rights and Development in the new Millennium Paul Gready, Wouter Vandenhoe, 2013-10-23 In recent years human rights have assumed a central position in the discourse surrounding international development while human rights agencies have begun to more systematically address economic and social rights This edited volume brings together distinguished scholars to explore the merging of human rights and development agendas at local national and international levels They examine how this merging affects organisational change operational change and the role of relevant actors in bringing about change With a focus on practice and policy rather than pure theory the volume also addresses broader questions such as what human rights and development can learn from one another and whether the connections between the two fields are increasing or declining The book is structured in three sections Part I looks at approaches that combine human rights and development including chapters on drivers of change indicators donor and legal empowerment of the poor Part II focuses on organisational contexts and includes chapters on the UN at the country level EU development cooperation PLAN s children s rights based approach and ActionAid s human rights based approach Part III examines country contexts including chapters on the ILO in various settings the Congo Ethiopia and South Africa Human Rights and Development in the new Millennium Towards a Theory of Change will be of strong interest to students and scholars of human rights development studies political science and economics

Biodiversity Conservation C. A. Perrings, 2012-12-06 This volume is one of a number of publications to carry the results of the first research programme of the Royal Swedish Academy of Science s Beijer Institute The Institute was formed in 1991 in order to promote interdisciplinary research between natural and social scientists on the interdependency between economic and ecological systems In its first research programme the Biodiversity Programme the Institute brought together a number of leading economists and ecologists to address the theoretical and policy issues associated with the current high rates of biodiversity loss in such systems whether the result of direct depletion the destruction of habitat or specialisation in agriculture forestry and fisheries | This volume reports some of the more policy oriented work carried out under the programme The broad aim of the programme is to further our understanding of the causes and consequences of biodiversity loss and to identify the options for addressing the problem The results have turned out to be surprising to those who see biodiversity loss primarily in terms of the erosion of the genetic library In various ways the work carried out under the programme has already begun to alter our perception of where the problem in biodiversity loss lies and what policy options are available to deal with it Indeed the programme has provided a powerful set of arguments for reappraising not just the economic and ecological implications of biodiversity loss but the whole case for development based on specialisation of resource use Implementing Domestic Tradable Permits for Environmental Protection
