Doing Fieldwork Robert A. Rubinstein, 2017-08-02 Prior to the 1930s the highlands of Guatemala were largely undescribed except in travelogues Just two decades later the highlands had become one of the most anthropologically well investigated areas of the world This is largely due to the research that Robert Redfield and Sol Tax carried out between 1934 and 1941 Separately and together Redfield and Tax anticipated and guided anthropological investigations of people living in peasant and urban communities in other areas of the world Their work helped to define the major outlines of research in the 1970s and since then much writing about the region has been formulated in critical response to the Redfield Tax program Not coincidentally since the mid 1970s anthropology has been caught up in a wave of self doubt about the status of fieldwork and the authority of ethnographic description This critical stance has often cast ethnography as a creative literary enterprise This volume presents a timely view of the process of ethnography as carried out by two of its early practitioners Containing a wealth of ethnographic detail the book reveals how Redfield and Tax developed and tested ethnological hypotheses and it allows us to follow the development of their major theoretical statements The result is an exceptionally clear picture of the process of ethnography Redfield and Tax emerge as rigorous and sensitive observers of social life whose observations bear importantly on contemporary understandings of the ethnology of Guatemala and the enterprise of anthropology This book will be of interest to students of method and theory in ethnography Latin Americanists and other professionals interested in the history of idea

Doing Fieldwork Robert Redfield, Sol Tax, Between 1934 and 1941 Robert Redfield and Sol Tax developed lines of research that anticipated and guided anthropological investigations of people living in peasant and urban communities This book traces the development of their ethnological hypotheses and theoretical statements and Insurgency presents a vivid ethnographic account of secrecy as both sociality and a set of knowledge practices Informed by multi sited anthropological fieldwork among displaced communities with experiences of militancy in the guerrilla organization Fuerzas Armadas Rebeldes the book traces the contours of dispersed and intermittent guerrilla social relations unraveling the gendered dimensions of guerrilla socialities and subjectivities in a local context marked by violence and rapid social change The chapters chart shifting regimes of governance in the northern departamento of Pet n the inception of violence and insurgency guerrilla practices of naming and secret relations moral orders based on sameness and sharing and forms of relatedness embodiment and subjectivity among the combatants The volume develops new critical idioms for grappling with partiality perspective and incompleteness in ethnography and contributes to new thinking on the anthropology of Guatemala Secrecy and Insurgency will be of interest to social and cultural anthropologists human geographers and scholars in Latin American studies human rights women s studies and gender studies Peacekeeping Under Fire Robert A. Rubinstein,2015-11-17 The international community increasingly responds to civil wars humanitarian crises and other intrastate conflicts through the instrument of UN peacekeeping Nearly all of these interventions take place in non Western areas and involve interactions among militaries and nongovernmental organizations from all around the globe In this wide ranging book Rubinstein draws on decades of his own research on peacekeeping and on other current and historical cases to develop a broad understanding of the roles that culture plays in peacekeeping s success or failure Peacekeeping under Fire shows that cultural considerations are key elements at all levels of peacekeeping operations Culture influences what happens between peacekeepers and local populations how military and nongovernmental organizations interact and even how missions are planned and authorized Peacekeeping under Fire analyzes how political symbolism and ritual are critical to peacekeeping and demonstrates how questions of power identity and political perception emerge from the cultural context of peacekeeping Anthropology and Ethnography are Not Equivalent Irfan Ahmad,2021-01-14 In recent years crucial questions have been raised about anthropology as a discipline such as whether ethnography is central to the subject and how imagination reality and truth are joined in anthropological enterprises These interventions have impacted anthropologists and scholars at large This volume contributes to the debate about the interrelationships between ethnography and anthropology and takes it to a new plane Six anthropologists with field experience in Egypt Greece India Laos Mauritius Thailand and Switzerland critically discuss these propositions in order to renew anthropology for the future The volume concludes with an Afterword from Tim Ingold Histories of Anthropology Annual ,2005 The Hispanic American Historical Review James Alexander Robertson,2003 Includes Bibliographical section Annals of Iowa ,2003 Report New South Wales. Department of Lands,1891 Annual Review of Anthropology ,1988 A Guatemalan Tale of Two Wives Janferie Joy Stone,2007 Journal of the Legislative Council New South Wales. Parliament.
