Donors Are People Too Timothy Smith, 2020-04-10 It s very clear Nonprofit organizations need major donors In his nearly four decades of helping nonprofit organizations raise funds to accomplish their missions author Timothy Smith witnessed a clear pattern The vast majority of donors giving to organizations participate through mass media meaning the mail the telephone or the Internet No charity in the world has enough staff members to sit down with every donor personally and form a personal relationship But over time we see certain donors emerge as major players They give more than the average individual signaling their higher level of interest in the cause and signaling their interest in a closer relationship with the nonprofit organization How should the organization respond to these major donors Timothy Smith has the answers to this question and many others He has shown us that a healthy nonprofit organization will invest itself in all of its donors to the full extent of the organization s capacity With unlimited resources the organization could treat every donor like a major donor But with limited resources the organization must invest in each donor according to the donor s expressed level of interest in the mission of the organization This is simply good practical management In the pages of Donors Are People Too Timothy offers wise and proven insights into the care and keeping of major donors He did not spring from the earth fully formed he has learned a lot the hard way One of his best qualities is his willingness to confront his own failures and learn from them to reveal his experiences and share wisdom through them His candor is refreshing and his insights are valuable
