The Domestic Revolution Eve Tavor Bannet, 2000-11-10 Alongside the three revolutions we usually identify with the long eighteenth century the French Revolution the American Revolution and the Glorious Revolution of 1688 Enlightenment ideology gave rise to a quieter but no less significant revolution which was largely the fruit of women's imagination and the result of women's work In The Domestic Revolution Eve Tavor Bannet explores how eighteenth century women writers of novels conduct books and tracts addressed key social political and economic issues revising public thinking about the family and refashioning women's sexual and domestic conduct Bannet examines the works of women writers who fell into two distinct camps Matriarchs such as Eliza Haywood Maria Edgeworth and Hannah More argued that women had a superiority of sense and virtue over men and needed to take control of the family Egalitarians such as Fanny Burney Mary Hays and Mary Wollstonecraft sought to level hierarchies both in the family and in the state believing that a family should be based on consensual relations between spouses and between parents and children Bannet shows how Matriarch and Egalitarian writers in their different ways sought to raise women from their inferior standing relative to men in the household in cultural representations and in prescriptive social norms Both groups promoted an idealized division of labor between women and men later to be dubbed the doctrine of separate spheres The Domestic Revolution focuses on women's debates with each other and with male ideologues alternating between discursive and fictional arguments to show how women translated their feminist positions into fictional exemplars Bannet demonstrates which issues joined and separated different camps of eighteenth century women tracing the origins of debates that continue to shape contemporary feminist thought

The Family, Marriage, and Radicalism in British Women's Novels of the 1790s Jennifer Golightly, 2012-02-01 This book explores the ways in which five female radical novelists of the 1790s Elizabeth Inchbald Eliza Fenwick Mary Hays Charlotte Smith and Mary Wollstonecraft attempted to use the components of private life to work toward widespread social reform These writers depict the conjugal family as the site for a potential reformation of the prejudices and flaws of the biological family The biological family in the radical novels of female writers is fraught with problems greed and selfishness pervert the relationships between siblings and neglect and ignorance characterize the parenting received by the heroines Additionally the radical novelists responding to representations of biological families as inherently restrictive for unmarried women develop the notion of marriage to a certain type of man as a social duty Marriage between two properly sensible people who have both cultivated their reason and understanding and who can live together as equals sharing domestic responsibilities is shown to be an ideal with the power to create social change Positioning their depictions of marriage in opposition to earlier feminist depictions of female utopian societies the female radical novelists of the 1790s strive to depict relationships between men and women that are characterized by cooperation individual autonomy and equality What is most important about these depictions is their ultimate failure Most of the female radical novelists find such marriages nearly impossible to conceptualize

Marriage for many of the female radical novelists was an institution they perceived as inextricably related to male concerns about property and inescapably patriarchal under the marriage laws of late eighteenth century British society. Unions between two worthy individuals outside the boundaries of marriage are shown in the female radical novels to be equally problematic. Sex inevitably is the basis for such unions yet sex leaves women vulnerable to exploitation by men. Rather than the triumph therefore of what comes to be in these novels the male associated values of property and power through marriage the female radical novels end by suggesting an alternative community one that will shelter those members of society who are most frequently exploited in male attempts to accumulate this property and power: women servants and children.

Precarious Domesticity and the British Novel Henna Messina, 2024-11-19. Precarious Domesticity and the British Novel. Space, Gender and Empire investigates the ways domesticity shapes and threatens female characters in British fiction from the 1750s to the 1850s. Going far beyond the well trod ground of the marriage plot, women writers in this period explored complicated issues such as sexual abuse, grief and the way coverture and inheritance laws challenged women's survival. The author argues that women writers used the novel as a space where they could confront anxieties about the precarity of domesticity and the implicit threat of homelessness many women of the middle ranks faced. Precarious Domesticity explores the way female characters subvert these dynamics by reordering domestic space to enact ingenious and creative resistances to their marginalization in Jane Collier, Sarah Scott, Frances Burney, Jane Austen, Elizabeth Gaskell and Charlotte Brontë. The author also explores the implications of British imperialism's impact on domestic ideology both in the consumer products imported into England and the wealth derived from plantation slavery and global trade made possible by enslaved labor.

Novels, Needleworks, and Empire Chloe Wigston Smith, 2024-03-12. The first sustained study of the vibrant links between domestic craft and British colonialism. In the eighteenth century women's contributions to empire took fewer official forms than those collected in state archives. Their traces were recorded in material ways through the ink they applied to paper or the artifacts they created with muslin, silk, threads, feathers and shells. Handiwork such as sewing, knitting, embroidery and other crafts formed a familiar presence in the lives and learning of girls and women across social classes and it was deeply connected to colonialism. Chloe Wigston Smith follows the material and visual images of the Atlantic world that found their way into the hands of women and girls in Britain and early America in the objects they made, the books they held, the stories they read and in doing so adjusted and altered the form and content of print and material culture. A range of artifacts made by women, including makers of color, brought the global into conversation with domestic crafts and consequently placed images of empire and colonialism within arm's reach. Together fiction and handicrafts offer new evidence of women's material contributions to the home's place within the global eighteenth century, revealing the rich and complex connections between the global and the domestic.

The Lives and Letters of an Eighteenth-century Circle of Acquaintance Temma F. Berg, 2006. While most of the letter writers are unknown, four achieved prominence: the author

Charlotte Lennox the Reverend Thomas Winstanley the navigator Charles Clerke and the bluestocking Susannah Dobson This book presents new perspectives on Lennox's and Winstanley's domestic lives Clerke's ambiguous encounters with indigenous peoples and Dobson's mysterious sexuality This book will appeal to eighteenth century scholars as well as to scholars in women's and cultural studies It will also be of interest to postcolonial queer and other literary theorists BOOK JACKET

Designing Women Tita Chico,2005 Drawing on extensive archival research Chico argues that the dressing room embodies contradictory connotations linked to the eroticism and theatricality of the playhouse tiring room as well as to the learning and privilege of the gentleman's closet The Rise of the Novel Nicholas Seager,2017-09-16 Why have scholars located the emergence of the novel in eighteenth century England What historical forces and stylistic developments helped to turn a disreputable type of writing into an eminent literary form This Reader's Guide explores the key critical debates and theories about the rising novel from eighteenth century assessments through to present day concerns Nicholas Seager Surveys major criticism on authors such as Aphra Behn Daniel Defoe Samuel Richardson Henry Fielding and Jane Austen Covers a range of critical approaches and topics including feminism historicism postcolonialism and print culture Demonstrates how critical work is interrelated allowing readers to discern trends in the critical conversation Approachable and stimulating this is an invaluable introduction for anyone studying the origins of the novel and the surrounding body of scholarship A Genealogy of the Gentleman Mary Beth Harris,2024-03-15 A Genealogy of the Gentleman argues that eighteenth century women writers made key interventions in modern ideals of masculinity and authorship through their narrative constructions of the gentleman It challenges two latent critical assumptions first that the gentleman's masculinity is normative private and therefore oppositional to concepts of performance and second that women writers from their disadvantaged position within a patriarchal society had no real means of influencing dominant structures of masculinity By placing writers such as Mary Davys Eliza Haywood Charlotte Lennox Elizabeth Inchbald and Mary Robinson in dialogue with canonical representatives of the gentleman author Joseph Addison and Richard Steele David Hume Samuel Johnson and Samuel Richardson Mary Beth Harris shows how these women carved out a space for their literary authority not by overtly opposing their male critics and society's patriarchal structure but by rewriting the persona of the gentleman as a figure whose very desirability and appeal were dependent on women's influence Ultimately this project considers the import of these women writers legacy both progressive and conservative on hegemonic standards of masculinity that persist to this day

Early Feminists and the Education Debates Carol Strauss Sotiropoulos,2007 Early Feminists and the Education Debates argues that most reformists creatively borrowed from the Romantic semantics of their opposition as well as from strategies associated with fictional narratives of education to subvert the ideology of training for domesticity In particular many invoked the construct of the maternal educator adapting and reshaping it to stake their claim for women's advanced education BOOK JACKET      Sexual Antipodes Pamela Cheek, 2003 It thus proposes that competing claims about the role of sex in British and French public life claims tested in British and French colonial representations established the conditions for placing modern Western European sexual identity BOOK JACKET      The Eighteenth-century Novel ,2002      The Sheila Carmel Lectures, 1994-2004 Sheila Carmel, 2005      The Eighteenth Century American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies, 2004 In their hundreds of entries and reviews the editorial staff have expanded both the quantity and depth of the work but also re evaluated the subject headings to better reflect the needs of users be they professionals or students General categories include printing and bibliographical studies historical social and economic studies philosophy      Consortium on the Revolutionary Era Selected Papers Consortium on the Revolutionary Era, 1750-1850, 2007      Tulsa Studies in Women's Literature ,2008      The Huntington Library Quarterly Henry E.
