Information is also available on the Internet. For example, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) provides information on the health effects of various pollutants, and the World Health Organization (WHO) provides information on the health effects of various pollutants.

They have provided the impetus for thinking in terms of self and others, a process that leads to a more integrated view of the world.

Figure 1. The relationship between the number of species and the number of individuals in a community. The number of individuals is plotted on the x-axis and the number of species on the y-axis. The curve shows that the number of species increases rapidly at first and then levels off as the number of individuals increases.
