Decision Making Process For Library Collections Case Studies In Four Types Of Libraries:

The Decision-Making Process for Library Collections Beatrice Kovacs, 1990-04-20 A considerable variety of information for libraries planning materials selection policies is relayed in reviews of the relevant literature and in case studies of typical special public academic and school libraries The case studies consider the location and size of each library as well as its budget organizational chart and materials selection procedure In all a good collection well organized and easy to use Actual collection development policies are appended along with bibliography and index Booklist As an outgrowth of the author's discovery that very little material exists discussing how to develop a library collection this book seeks to identify how some experienced selectors think while deciding to buy not buy or discard materials from their collections While subject areas or types of materials for which selectors are responsible may be vastly different the author found that all selectors do collection development in the same way and consider the same types of issues and problems in their decision making process The book then is designed to help librarians identify this process and understand the theoretical as well as practical aspects of building collections Based on information gathered over a period of six years in research at academic public school and special libraries the book will be just as valuable to experienced practitioners of collection development as it will be to students and newcomers to the field The first section discusses decision making and collection development including general trends theories and literature and organizational administration The second section provides case studies of four different types of libraries public school academic and special Each type is represented by studies of four specific libraries with a summary concluding each set of libraries Finally a third section draws conclusions based on the case studies covering dynamic factors affecting the decision making process as well as the process itself The book concludes with a group of appendices a bibliography and an index This important work will be an essential reference source for courses in library science and for working librarians in all types of institutions as well as a valuable addition to college university and public libraries the Scholar, and the Future of the Research Library Eldred Smith,1990-03-08 Today s research librarian exists within an environment of rapid and unrelenting change A wide and increasing variety of technological advances are transforming the communication organization and storage of information and the librarian s traditional function This work represents the first analytical discussion of the functional role of the research librarian as well as the relationship between the research librarian the scholar and the record of scholarship Key points include an in depth analytical treatment of the future nature of the research library and the future role of the research librarian fresh appraisals of research library cooperation and the application of technology to research libraries and a new look at preservation alternatives within the context of the research library s future Eldred Smith identifies the essential contribution that the research librarian makes to the scholarly process as well as how and why the librarian has throughout history been unable to fulfill the role completely He explores the scholar s information seeking practices and identifies the reasons why these are at odds with the information organization practices of librarians Also probed is the conflict that the librarian feels between preservation and the use of research library collections discussing how this conflict has influenced research library policy and practice Smith discusses the new electronic information technology as both a threat to the continuation of the research librarian s historical role and as an opportunity to fulfill that role more completely than in the past Also discussed are the steps that the research librarian needs to take in order to use the new technologies to advantage including a major redirection of collection preservation activities The book concludes with a discussion of the main features of the future research library which provide for a strengthened relationship between the librarian and the scholar as well as a more productive and substantive contribution by the research librarian to the scholarly process Research librarians academic librarians academic administrators and scholarly publishers will find a wealth of information in the pages of this book It will also serve as an ideal adjunct in any course dealing with the future of libraries and librarianship      Preview ,1990      Proceedings of Digital Libraries '95 Frank M. Shipman,Richard Furuta,David M. Levy,1995      Social Science Reference Sources Tze-chung Li,1990 The second edition of this guide to basic reference sources in the social sciences contains nearly three times as many entries 2 200 as the earlier edition and also includes several other notable enhancements In addition to revising and substantially enlarging the chapters on reference sources Li has further increased the usefulness of this reference volume by adding a chapter on geography and one on business that is distinct from economies Since the publication of the first edition there have been two obvious developments in information storage and retrieval the rapid development of online databases and the development of CD ROM Instead of devoting a separate chapter to these developments the book incorporates online databases CD ROM and other forms of data sources into the text In addition there is a brief introduction to these developments Although the general deadline for inclusion in the volume was December 1988 quite a few titles published in 1989 are included Critical Approaches to Information Technology in Librarianship John Buschman, 1993-08-23 Constant developments in information technology are creating fundamental changes in librarianship This book challenges the uncritical acceptance of these changes caused by technology The volume begins by explaining the importance of a critical approach to information technology in librarianship The first part of the book then explores the fundamental critical issues at the heart of technology in the library Chapters in this section consider such topics as the neutrality of technology information technology and censorship the role of computers in education and the sometimes critical views of scientists on technology The second part of the volume looks more closely at issues related to the application of technology in librarianship These chapters discuss technology and the civic role of libraries the political aspects of electronic information and the role of technology in the labor process A selected bibliography concludes the work Bibliography of Agriculture with Subject Index, 1990 On Information Usage Modeling Ping Pete Chong, 1994
