

The Declaration of Independence; The Evolution of the Text as Shown in Facsimiles of Various Drafts by its Author, Thomas Jefferson. BY JULIAN P. BOYD. (Princeton: Princeton University Press. 1945. Pp. 46, plus 46 pages of facsimiles. $3.50.)

This edition of The Declaration of Independence makes available to the public the brochure printed for the Library of Congress on the occasion of the Library's Bicentennial Exposition celebrating the two-hundredth anniversary of Jefferson's birth. In his account of the evolution of the text of the Declaration, Dr. Boyd has solved many of the most difficult problems relating to that famous document, problems previously studied by Becker, Hazelton, Fitzpatrick, and others, to all of whom Dr. Boyd pays due tribute.

Dr. Boyd first gives a brief account of the background of the Declaration, which was truly "an expression of the American mind." To Timothy Pickering's charge that Jefferson contributed nothing original or solely Jeffersonian, the reply is made that Jefferson "identified the harmonizing sentiments of the day with concepts of government which had an ancient and diverse lineage," and yet did it in a prose style which stamped the product of his pen "as indubitably and singly Jeffersonian." "The greatness of his achievement," declared Dr. Boyd, "aside from the fact that he created one of the outstanding literary documents of the world and of all time, was that he identified its sublime purpose with the roots of liberal traditions that spread back to England, to Scotland, to Geneva, to Holland, to Germany, to Rome, and to Athens."

Under the heading, "Two Influential Documents," Dr. Boyd asserts that when Jefferson sat down to the task of writing the Declaration it is scarcely possible that he could have escaped a reliance on his own draft of a proposed constitution for Virginia and on George Mason's bill of rights adopted by the convention of Virginia on June 12, 1776. This is evidenced by the fact that in his draft of a fundamental law for Virginia, Jefferson catalogued a series of charges against George III similar to his indictment of the king in the Declaration. The sequence of charges in both documents and their parallel phraseology indicate, according to Dr. Boyd, that Jefferson copied from his earlier document in writing the Declaration.

Of Jefferson's debt to George Mason's Declaration of Rights, Dr. Boyd says that "the similarity that exists is a similarity of ideas" and expresses doubt that the case has been proved that Jefferson was as directly influenced by Mason's Declaration as he was by his own proposed constitution of Virginia.

Six texts of the Declaration in Jefferson's handwriting, together with the copy in the handwriting of John Adams, are used to trace the evolu-
