Decoding the Ancient Novel Shadi Bartsch, 2014-07-14 Using a reader oriented approach Shadi Bartsch reconsiders the role of detailed descriptive accounts in the ancient Greek novels of Heliodorus and Achilles Tatius and in so doing offers a new view of the genre itself Bartsch demonstrates that these passages often misunderstood as mere ornamental devices form in fact an integral part of the narrative proper working to activate the audience's awareness of the play of meaning in the story As the crucial elements in the evolution of a relationship in which the author arouses and then undermines the expectations of his readership these passages provide the key to a better understanding and interpretation of these two most sophisticated of the ancient Greek romances In many works of the Second Sophistic descriptions of visual conveyors of meaning artworks and dreams signaled the presence of a deeper meaning This meaning was revealed in the texts themselves through an interpretation furnished by the author The two novels at hand however manipulate this convention of hermeneutic description by playing upon their readers expectations and luring them into the trap of incorrect exegesis Employed for different ends in the context of each work this process has similar implications in both for the relationship between reader and author as it arises out of the former's involvement with the text Originally published in 1989 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

Spectacles of Empire Christopher A. Frilingos, 2013-03-25 The book of Revelation presents a daunting picture of the destruction of the world complete with clashing gods a multiheaded beast armies of heaven and the final judgment of mankind The bizarre conclusion to the New Testament is routinely cited as an example of the early Christian renunciation of the might and values of Rome But Christopher A Frilingos contends that Revelation's relationship to its ancient environment was a rather more complex one In Spectacles of Empire he argues that the public displays of the Roman Empire the games of the arena the execution of criminals the civic veneration of the emperor offer a plausible context for reading Revelation Like the spectacles that attracted audiences from one end of the Mediterranean Sea to the other Revelation shares a preoccupation with matters of spectatorship domination and masculinity Scholars have long noted that in promising a complete reversal of fortune to an oppressed minority Revelation has provided inspiration to Christians of all kinds from liberation theologians protesting globalization to the medieval Apostolic Brethren facing death at the stake But Frilingos approaches the Apocalypse from a different angle arguing that Revelation was not merely a rejection of the Roman world in favor of a Christian one rather its visions of monsters and martyrs were the product of an empire whose subjects were trained to dominate the threatening other By comparing images in Revelation to those in other Roman era literature such as Greek romances and martyr accounts Frilingos reveals a society preoccupied with seeing and being seen At the same time he shows how Revelation calls attention to both the risk and the allure of taking in a show in a society which emphasized the careful scrutiny of one's friends enemies and self Ancient spectators Frilingos notes whether seated in an arena or standing at a distance as Babylon burned frequently discovered that they themselves had become part of the performance
