Drag Harlan:

'Drag' Harlan Charles Alden Seltzer, 2019-11-26 In Drag Harlan Charles Alden Seltzer crafts a compelling narrative that delves into the gritty realities of the American West during the early 20th century. Through vivid depictions of life on the frontier, Seltzer examines themes of isolation, resilience, and the moral complexities of survival in a lawless land. His engaging prose combines elements of rugged realism with a cinematic flair, allowing readers to visualize the stark landscapes and intricate social dynamics of the period. The novel not only reflects the adventurous spirit prevalent in early Western literature but also challenges the archetypal portrayal of heroes and villains, showcasing the shades of grey in human nature. Charles Alden Seltzer, a prominent figure in early 20th-century American literature, was profoundly influenced by his experiences in the West, having lived in various frontier towns. His background in journalism provided him with keen observational skills, which he adeptly translates into his character-driven storytelling. Seltzer's works often draw from his firsthand encounters, revealing a deep understanding of the hardships and aspirations of the people in this transformative era. Drag Harlan is an essential read for those interested in Western literature and the exploration of human resilience within hostile environments. It is a thought-provoking tale that invites readers to reflect on the complexities of morality and the indomitable spirit of the human condition, making it a remarkable addition to any literary collection.     "Drag" Harlan Charles Alden Seltzer, 1921

Drag Harlan (Large Print) Charles Alden Seltzer, 2015-04-24 From out of the shimmering haze that veiled the mystic eastern space came a big black horse bearing a rider Swinging wide to avoid the feathery dust that lay at the base of a huge sand dune the black horse loped making no sound and seeming to glide forward without effort Like a somber gigantic ghost the animal moved heroic of mold embodying the spirit of the country seeming to bear the sinister message of the desert the whispered promise of death the lingering threat the grim mockery of life and the conviction of futility The black horse had come far The glossy coat of him was thickly sprinkled with alkali dust sifted upon him by the wind of his passage through the desert his black muzzle was gray with it ropes of it matted his mane his forelock had become a gray tinged wisp which he fretfully tossed the dust had rimmed his eyes causing them to loom large and wild and as his rider pulled him to a halt on the western side of the sand dune where both horse and rider would not be visible on the sky line he drew a deep breath shook his head vigorously and blew a thin stream of dust from his nostrils With head and ears erect his eyes flaming his undying courage and his contempt for distance and the burning heat that the midday sun poured upon him he gazed westward snorting long breaths into his eager lungs The rider sat motionless upon him rigid and alert His gaze also went into the west and he blinked against the white glare of sun and distance squinting his eyes and scanning the featureless waste with appraising glances In the breathless dead calm of the desert there was no sound or movement On all sides the vast gray waste stretched a yawning inferno of dead dry sand overhung with a brassy cloudless sky in which swam the huge ball of molten silver that for ages had ruled that baked and shriveled land
