McLaren,2002-10-10 Addressing central questions in the debate about Foucault s usefulness for politics including his rejection of universal norms his conception of power and power knowledge his seemingly contradictory position on subjectivity and his resistance to using identity as a political category McLaren argues that Foucault employs a conception of embodied subjectivity that is well suited for feminism She applies Foucault s notion of practices of the self to contemporary feminist practices such as consciousness raising and autobiography and concludes that the connection between self transformation and social transformation that Foucault theorizes as the connection between subjectivity and institutional and social norms is crucial for contemporary feminist theory and politics Domination, Resistance, and Social Change in South Africa Kathryn Manzo,1992-09-15 Manzo examines by means of historical analysis the effects of global power relationships on the politics of South Africa The author looks at the ways in which global power constructs identity normalizes relations of domination and shapes the form that resistance takes She asks for example why dominated people are so often waging conflicts among themselves rather than directing their resistance unflinchingly toward their oppressors Why too is open defiance relatively rare and mass action infrequently used South Africa as an example is used to illustrate the much broader experience of oppressed populations as they struggle against western domination The book vividly portrays the complexity of relationships in South Africa and the role played by black resistance in economic and political change over time Manzo s sound interpretation unifies and enriches the historical progression and establishes a solid foundation for analyzing the lessons South Africa offers about the use of power in international relations Dialogues
