rich collection of best practices in the use of instructional technology from 36 of America's most wired campuses. In 93 brief informal and practical vignettes, professors show how they transformed courses with technology, discuss how the technology affected teaching and learning, and distill important lessons learned. The accounts are written in lay language and are brimming with information and examples that will help anyone from the novice to the computer savvy who is interested in classroom applications of technology.

Live and Online! Jennifer Hofmann, 2004-02-26. This book suggests tips for the virtual classroom, ways for trainers to communicate and for students to behave when body language and eye contact are eliminated. The successful online program starts with valid content and instructional design. Next, there must be participant motivation, opportunities to collaborate and interact, usable technology, and an active trainer. A CD-ROM contains sample exercises for using whiteboards, chats, breakout rooms, application sharing, and synchronous web browsing. Appendices include a design checklist, sample leader and participant guides, vendor list, and glossary.

Designing Portals Ali Jafari, Mark C. Sheehan, 2003. Portals present unique strategic challenges in the academic environment. Their conceptualization and design requires the input of campus constituents who seldom interact and whose interests are often opposite. The implementation of a portal requires a coordination of applications and databases controlled by different campus units at a level that may never before have been attempted at the institution. Building a portal is as much about constructing intra-campus bridges as it is about user interfaces and content.

Designing Portals: Opportunities and Challenges discusses the current status of portals in higher education by providing insight into the role portals play in an institution's business and educational strategy by taking the reader through the processes of conceptualization, design, and implementation of the portals in different stages of development at major universities and by offering insight from three producers of portal software systems in use at institutions of higher learning and elsewhere.
