A Dalesman's Diary

October 2023

Cradled gently in the arms of an expert handler, a curlew is electronically tagged with satellite technology as part of a Dales ecology project. The future of this most iconic of birds, the symbol of your Dalesman, is fragilely balanced, although efforts have long been under way to safeguard it.

Now it is hoped that this latest initiative between the British Trust for Ornithology (BTO) and the Yorkshire Dales National Park, funded by the Department for Environment, Food & Rural Affairs, will provide vital information to help our curlew population prosper. The aim of the project, now in its second year, is to understand curlew behaviour – information that can then be used to help them.

The researchers are working with local farmers, landowners and other stakeholders to gather information about curlew movements and migration patterns.

Once this information is gathered and analysed, it is hoped that it can be used to improve farming techniques in the national parks and Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty to help protect wildlife.

Dr Samantha Franks, a senior research ecologist with the BTO, and Dr Katharine Bowgen, a research ecologist, have spent months trapping, tagging and collecting data on the curlew.
