Earth Repair Marcus Hall, 2005 Just as the restoration of Michelangelo's Last Judgment sparked enormous controversy in the art world so are environmental restorationists intensely divided when it comes to finding ways to rehabilitate damaged ecosystems Although environmental restoration is quickly becoming a widespread pursuit debate over the methods and goals of this endeavor often halts progress The same question confronts artistic and environmental restorationists Which systems need restoring and to what states should they be restored In Earth Repair A Transatlantic History of Environmental Restoration Marcus Hall explores the answer to this question while offering an alternative to the usual narrative of humans disrupting and spoiling the earth Hall's purpose is not to deny that humans have done lasting damage but to show that those who believed in restoration did not always agree on what they wanted to restore or how or to what form With guidance from the pioneer conservationist George Perkins Marsh the reader travels between the United States and Italy to see that restoration has taken many forms over the past two hundred years from maintaining and repairing to gardening and naturalizing By contrasting land management in these two countries and elsewhere Earth Repair clarifies different meanings of restoration shows how such meanings have changed through time and place and suggests how restorationists can apply these insights to their own practices

Restoration of Damaged Ecosystems John Cairns, W. T. Mason (Jr.), Sam Iker, United States. Environmental Protection Agency, 1982 Ecological Restoration in International Environmental Law Anastasia Telesetsky, An Cliquet, Afshin Akhtar-Khavari, 2016-12-01 Human activities are depleting ecosystems at an unprecedented rate In spite of nature conservation efforts worldwide many ecosystems including those critical for human well being have been damaged or destroyed States and citizens need a new vision of how humans can reconnect with the natural environment With its focus on the long term holistic recovery of ecosystems ecological restoration has received increasing attention in the past decade from both scientists and policymakers Research on the implications of ecological restoration for the law and law for ecological restoration has been largely overlooked This is the first published book to examine comprehensively the relationship between international environmental law and ecological restoration While international environmental law IEL has developed significantly as a discipline over the past four decades this book enquires

whether IEL can now assist states in making a strategic transition from not just protecting and maintaining the natural environment but also actively restoring it. Arguing that states have international duties to restore, this book offers reflections on the philosophical context of ecological restoration and the legal content of a duty to restore from an international law, European Union law, and national law perspective. The book concludes with a discussion of several contemporary themes of interest to both lawyers and ecologists, including the role of private actors, protected areas, and climate change in ecological restoration.

Study of Ecological Engineering of Human Settlements Jianfeng Zhang, 2019-11-20. This book analyzes the theory of ecological engineering of human settlements and provides case studies on the improvement of degraded lands and vegetation restoration, especially focusing on saline alkali land, abandoned land, water source areas, and the impact of green belts on noise and air quality on the highways. In addition, it discusses the issue of biodiversity conservation strategies in rural landscape construction and demonstrates experiment measurement and field survey methods. The results obtained are supplemented by numerical calculations presented in the form of tables and figures. As the first monograph on this subject, the book provides a wealth of ideas and resources for researchers, professionals, and practitioners in the field of human settlements.

Ecological Restoration Andre F. Clewell, James Aronson, 2012-07-26. The field of ecological restoration is a rapidly growing discipline that encompasses a wide range of activities and brings together practitioners and theoreticians from a variety of backgrounds and perspectives, ranging from volunteer backyard restorationists to highly trained academic scientists and professional consultants. Ecological Restoration offers for the first time a unified vision of ecological restoration as a field of study, one that clearly states the discipline's precepts and emphasizes issues of importance to those involved at all levels. In a lively, personal fashion, the authors discuss scientific and practical aspects of the field as well as the human needs and values that motivate practitioners. The book identifies fundamental concepts upon which restoration is based, considers the principles of restoration practice, explores the diverse values that are fulfilled with the restoration of ecosystems, reviews the structure of restoration practice, including the various contexts for restoration work the professional development of its practitioners and the relationships of restoration with allied fields and activities A unique feature of the book is the inclusion of eight virtual field trips short photo essays of project sites around the world that illustrate various points made in the book and are led by those who were intimately involved with the project described Throughout ecological restoration is conceived as a holistic endeavor one that addresses issues of ecological degradation biodiversity loss and sustainability science simultaneously and draws upon cultural resources and local skills and knowledge in restoration work
