Surviving Large Losses Philip T. Hoffman, Gilles Postel-Vinay, Jean-Laurent Rosenthal, 2009-07 Listen to a short interview with Philip T Hoffman Host Chris Gondek Producer Heron Crane Financial disasters often have long range institutional consequences When financial institutions banks insurance companies brokerage firms stock exchanges collapse new ones take their place and these changes shape markets for decades or even generations Surviving Large Losses explains why such financial crises occur why their effects last so long and what political and economic conditions can help countries both rich and poor survive and even prosper in the aftermath Looking at past and more recent financial disasters through the lens of political economy the authors identify three factors critical to the development of financial institutions the level of government debt the size of the middle class and the quality of information that is available to participants in financial transactions They seek to find out when these factors promote financial development and mitigate the effects of financial crises and when they exacerbate them Although there is no panacea for crises no one set of institutions that will resolve them it is possible the authors argue to strengthen existing financial institutions to encourage economic growth and to limit the harm that future catastrophes can do

Extreme Pursuits Graham Huggan, 2010-05-18 Recent figures suggest that there will be 1.6 billion arrivals at world airports by the year 2020 Extreme Pursuits looks at the new conditions of global travel and the unease even paranoia that underlies them at the opportunities they offer for alternative identities and their oscillation between remembered and anticipated states Graham Huggan offers a provocative account of what is happening to travel at a time characterized by extremes of social and political instability in which adrenaline filled travelers appear correspondingly determined to take risks It includes discussions of the links between tourism and terrorism of contemporary modes of disaster tourism and of the writing that derives from these but it also confirms the existence of more responsible forms of travel writing that demonstrate awareness of a chronically endangered world Extreme Pursuits is the first study of its kind to link travel writing explicitly with structural changes in the global tourist industry The book makes clear that travel writing can no longer take refuge in the classic distinctions traveler versus tourist foreigner versus native on which it previously depended Such distinctions which were dubious in the first place no longer make sense in an increasingly globalized world Huggan argues accordingly that the category travel writing must include experimental ethnography and prose fiction that it should concern itself with other kinds of travel practices such as those related to Holocaust deportation and migrant labor and that it should encompass representations of travelers and traveling cultures that appear in popular media especially TV and film Graham Huggan is Professor of Commonwealth and Postcolonial Literatures at the University of Leeds He is the coauthor with Patrick Holland of Tourists with Typewriters
