Decentralization Of Education Community Financing:

Decentralization of Education Mark Bray, 1996-01-01 This book focuses on the financing of formal primary and secondary education in developing nations. The study does not consider the areas of pre primary, post secondary or nonformal education. Financing includes not only monetary inputs to education but also material, labor, expertise and land. The study examines the volume, nature and mechanics of community financing in a range of settings. Policy issues facing governments and those who work with them are presented. Instruments for incentives, guidance and control of community activities are considered. Specific strategies from different countries are presented and evaluated along with the importance of monitoring and evaluation. The paper concludes by summarizing the lessons in the context of debate about centralization and decentralization. Sections of the book include: 1. Communities and Their Characteristics; 2. Scale, Motivation and Nature of Community Financing; 3. Mechanics of Community Financing; 4. Policy Issues Confronting Governments; 5. Government Incentives, Guidance and Controls; 6. Challenges and Risks; 7. Monitoring and Evaluation; and 8. Conclusion. Contains an 87 item list of references. EH Decentralization of Education Mark Bray, Banco Mundial, 1996

Decentralization of Education Harry Anthony Patrinos, David Lakshmanan Ariasingam, 1997-01-01 Central governments supply side expansions of schooling have not equally benefited all members of society, especially girls, indigenous peoples, tribal groups, disadvantaged minorities and the poor. Public spending on education is often inefficient; higher education is subsidized at primary education's expense and costs are becoming insupportable. To tackle such issues, some governments are exploring demand side financing whereby public funds are given directly to individuals or institutions on the basis of expressed demand. Use of decentralized demand side financing mechanisms like vouchers and stipends is common in member countries of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. After defining several mechanisms, this booklet provides some country examples aiming to increase school enrollment: stipends in Bangladesh; community financing in Chad; targeted bursaries in China and Mexico; voucher schemes in Colombia; assistance to private schools serving poor children in the Dominican Republic and Pakistan; student loans in Jamaica; and community grants in Pakistan. Program success depends on beneficiaries' involvement and support, parents' active participation, private sector schools' involvement, partnerships with commercial enterprises, flexibility, capacity building, cultural relevance, equity principles and transparent fund transfer formulas. Decentralization in Education Donald R. Winkler, 1989 Some decisionmaking about educational finance and teacher recruitment should be handled at the local level and some about school organization and curriculum at the regional level. Problems of equity can be addressed through a system of central government grants. Educational Decentralization Christopher Bjork, 2007-03-23 Decentralization and Education: Asian Experiences and Conceptual Contributions examines the specific ways in which decentralization policies have affected the structure and delivery of education in eleven Asian nations. Written by top scholars in the field, the case studies provide detailed and rich empirical evidence documenting the tensions as well as synchronisms between the ideas that form the basis of decentralization policy and the contexts into which they are introduced. The high quality of this collection of essays and the careful attention to local contexts for implementation will make this book a must read for academics, policy planners, practitioners and students of Asia. Decentralization of Education Ketleen Florestal, Robb Cooper, 1997-01-01. In practice, most education systems have both centralized and decentralized elements. Planners involved in a decentralizing reform must identify which components of the system are more appropriately managed at the central level and which at the local level. This book is intended to inform education policymakers, planners and practitioners about international experience in the legal aspects of decentralizing basic education. It also provides a basic understanding of how laws and regulations can be used for education reform. For purposes of the discussion, decentralization is used to describe efforts to transfer decision making power in basic education from the administrative center of a country to authorities closer to users. The term is also used in a more technical sense to describe one of the many forms this type of reform can take and in this sense it is contrasted with deconcentration and devolution as educational reforms. The first section examines the general legal aspects of decentralization and the second looks more closely at decentralization laws and regulations. The third section is in effect a checklist of items that should be included in decentralization laws and the fourth section provides a road map to help the planner prepare and implement the laws required for reform. Although an effort has been made to keep the discussion general enough for use in many countries, the analysis is based on the legal systems of the Western world or those that they inspired. Comparative Education Robert F. Arnove, Carlos Alberto Torres, 2007. Comparative Education examines the common problems facing education systems around the world as the result of global economic, social and cultural forces. Issues related to the governance, financing, provision, processes and outcomes of education systems for differently situated social groups are described and analyzed in specific regional, national and local contexts. Rethinking World Bank Influence D. Brent Edwards Jr., 2023-04-13. Why is it so hard for international development organizations, even ones as well resourced and influential as the World Bank, to generate and sustain change in the way things are done in those countries where they work? Despite what in many cases is decades of investment and effort, why do partner governments continue to engage in those traditional patterns and styles of public service management that international development organizations have sought to supplant with methods that are supposedly more accountable, efficient and effective? This book provides an answer to these questions. However, rather than pathologizing partner governments as the source of the problem, that is, rather than maintaining the distinction between doctor (international development organizations) and patient (partner governments) wherein the patient is seen as unwilling to take their medicine, enacting good governance practices, this book instead reframes the relationship. The central argument is first that the programs and projects of international organizations are introduced into and are constrained by multiple layers of ritual governance that is performative acts and cultural logics that intersect with and reinforce the political economic and social structures in and through which they operate As is shown the contextual factors that guide governance practices are largely beyond the reach of the international development organizations the relevant logics have their roots in state ideology but also extend back to the colonial logics that continue to operate at the heart of the state apparatus The second the central argument is that international aid organizations and the governments with which they work are engaged in a ritual aid dance where each actor plays a part but does not and cannot acknowledge the ways that it depends on the other for its own gain This relationship can be considered a dance because each participant responds to and needs the other and because both sides do so in ways that are carefully choreographed with the overall trajectory or contours of the dance being more or less known to the participants These arguments are based on research on the World Bank s efforts over the course of several decades to encourage through its financing projects and technical assistance the implementation of social sector reform in Indonesia related to decentralization community participation and school based management Resources in Education ,1998

Education Financing and Budgetary Reforms in Africa Oluyele Akinkugbe,Vusi Kunene,2001 This book sets out the Swaziland educational model and policies and in the context of the management of the national economy It shows that the proportion of the annual government budget devoted to education in Swaziland ranks amongst the highest in Africa and many of the goals set at the world summit for children in 1990 are being achieved There is universal access of primary education gender equality of access across almost all levels of education The study also shows however that less positively the system is increasingly under financial pressure particularly to fund the growing demand for higher education comparatively very expensive The co authors advocate comprehensive budgetary and financial reforms drawing up a model in line with current policy directions to increase funding for tertiary education and so release more funds for improving quality at lower levels Household Willingness and (in)ability to Pay for Education Pauline Rose,2001 Catalog of Publications World Bank Group,2000 Complete current catalog of all print and online journals and monographs Agents of Change Asian Development Bank,2007 Fundamentals of Educational Planning ,1999 Bibliographie Mensuelle
