Frankel, 2008-12-21 Over the years I have worked with or consulted for many managers throughout the world at all levels of industry and government. I have seen who succeeded, achieved goals and made progress and who failed or crashed. I have studied their methods of operation and their decision making approach as well as the range of people involved in the decision making. I similarly personally managed large industrial and service organizations and their operations and found that to succeed and have a content team of collaborators, decision making had to be joint and delegated to the lowest competent and informed level. Using this approach not only improved the performance of the organization or firm but also resulted in a more content, professional, cooperative, happy and competent workforce. In general, people like to assume responsibility, particularly of functions with which they are intimately familiar. They enjoy the role of decision maker and the use of their knowledge and experience in guiding their and related work. Delegation of decision making not only infuses pride and contentment but also assures more informed, timely and effective implementation of decisions. It also adds to worker training and education as workers inquire, develop information and use of their own experience in improving their decision making. Worker pride and feeling of control and involvement lead to contentment and satisfaction which in return pays dividends in worker productivity, morale, retention and resulting low turnover.
